Smathers Wins Pepper's Senate Seat

Florida Race Is Conceded By Veteran Incumbent

'Middle-of-Road' Liberal Member of House Was in Lead Throughout Count

Miami, Fla., May 3 (AP).—Representative George Smathers tonight won the U. S. Senate seat held for 14 years by New-Dealing Claude Pepper. Pepper conceded his own defeat at 12:15 a. m. (EST.).

Pepper's statement came when returns from 1231 precincts of 1595 gave him 250,741 votes to Smathers' 304,426.

Smathers' victory projected into the Senate a 36-year-old former Marine major who, in two terms in the House, has gone along with President Truman's program on most issues. But he has opposed the Administration on others.

Victory in today's primary is equivalent to election. Florida Democrats customarily command a 15-to-1 edge over the Republicans.

Smathers voted for the Taft-Hartley law and has warmly defended that stand in his campaign. Pepper opposed that act and pledged to continue seeking its repeal.

The 6-foot-3-inch Congressman, who once captained the University of Florida basketball team, has consistently fought Mr. Truman's FEPC legislation and has campaigned as a determined enemy of proposed national health insurance measures.

On foreign policy, the rivals have almost identical records of strong support for the Truman Administration. Their only major divergence on foreign matters was Smathers' support of direct military aid to Turkey and Greece. Pepper favored aid through the United Nations.

They have disagreed only slightly on farm price support. Pepper advocated 90 per cent of parity for nearly all farm products. Smathers gave his vote to a bill to cut some products below that figure.

Smathers consistently attacked Pepper as a friend of pro-Communist elements, and assailed the CIO Political Action Committee for supporting his opponent. Pepper has vigorously denied any sympathy for Communism.

The CIO Political Action Committee found itself right in the middle of other final campaign blasts.

Smathers asserted in a broadcast that the CIO-PAC had sent hundreds of paid workers from other States to get out a "block vote" of Negroes for Pepper. He has struck repeatedly at "Northern labor bosses" and what he called their "carpet baggers of 1950."

Pepper retorted with large newspaper advestisements today which contained an affidavit by Tilford E. Dudley, assistant director of the PAC in Washington, that Smathers himself had secretly sought and obtained CIO support in his successful 1946 race for a House seat.

British Concessions Made on Ruhr Plant

Bonn, Germany, May 2 (AP).—British authorities said today they have made some concessions to German appeals for a modified dismantling of the Herman Goering steel plant near Brunswick.

British High Commissioner Sir Brian Robertson in a letter to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer accepted with reservations a German plan for conversion of parts of the plant for peacetime production.

Second-Degree Murder

Rigsbee Gets 15 Years to Life For Killing Gambler Scheve

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

James A. Rigsbee, 35, was sentenced yesterday to serve from 15 years to life imprisonment for second-degree murder in the "gangland" slaying of Gambler Joseph H. (Big Joe) Scheve.

Jut-jawed Rigbee, who was being tried in District Court for first-degree murder, escaped the electric chair when the jury at 6:18 p. m. returned with the lesser verdict after deliberating two hours.

Scheve, one-time operator of a big-money dice house on Woodley pl. nw., was shot in the back last December by Rigsbee in a 9th st. poolroom.

Testimony showed Scheve had threatened to kill Rigsbee earlier in the night of the slaying, but that the defendant left the poolroom to return an hour later, gun in hand. Four shots were fired, one hitting Scheve in the back, and another wounding a bystander, David Silverman, in the leg.

Rigsbee acknowledged the shooting, saying that he knew Scheve to be dangerous. He said Scheve had admitted killing one man who stood in his way.

Rigsbee contended that Scheve tried to hire him to murder William (Snags) Lewis, a convicted numbers lottery operator. According to the defendant, Scheve felt that the time was ripe to move in as head of Washington's gambling "syndicate," and that Lewis was an obstacle.

Lister Hill Has Margin

States Righters Are Leading In Alabama Party Fight

Birmingham, Ala., May 2 (U.P.).—Alabamians voted in record numbers today on whether to return their Democratic machinery to the national party and first returns indicated the decision would be close.

The issue was whether the States' Rights faction, which kept President Truman off the 1948 presidential ballot, or "loyalist" Democrats would win a majority on the 72-member Democratic executive committee.

Returns from 425 of the State's 2425 Boxes put States' Righters in the lead for 38 committee seats and the loyalists ahead in 33 races. One uncommitted candidate was ahead in his district.

In the United States Senate race which also involved the party split, Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), led States' Righter Lawrence McNeil by 8208 votes to 4981 with 224 boxes counted. Gordon Persons headed the 15-man scramble for the Governorship with 5816 votes.

Another interest in the governorship race was the entry of Phillip Hamm, Gov. "Big Jim" Folsom's candidate. Hamm's showing would prove whether the strapping governor, who could not succeed himself, still packed his ballot pull in the farms and valleys. Hamm, like his sponsor, was a loyal party man.

Senators Hill and John Sparkman (D., Ala.) both came South to stump for getting back in the party graces for the battles still to come on the civil rights issues. Although they wanted Alabama to remain loyal, their efforts left the administration cold because of their opposition to the party plank on FEPC.

Ferguson Has Lead in Ohio Senate Race

Columbus, Ohio, May 2 (AP).—Joseph T. Ferguson, Ohio's State auditor, piled up a two-to-one margin over his closest opponent tonight in his bid for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator.

Trailing him were six other candidates, including Mayor Michael V. DiSalle of Toledo, who was running second. The winner will face U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft in the November election.

The co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act, bidding for a third term despite strong labor opposition, was renominated by the Republicans in today's primary. No party member ran against him.

Returns from 575 of the State's 9736 polling places in the Democratic senatorial contest gave Ferguson 6745 votes to DiSalle's 3053. The five other aspirants ran far behind.

In the four-man contest for the Republican Governor nomination, Don H. Ebright was conceded the nomination at 11:35 p. m., by his closest opponent, Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus. Ebright is serving his 12th year as State treasurer.

Running third was Edward J. Hummel, a former Ohio Secretary of State, and fourth was George V. Woodling, a Rocky River business man.

The returns from 597 polling places gave: Ebright 10,746, Rhodes 5493, Hummel 1090, and Woodling 618.

If nominated, the 47-year-old Erbright would oppose Gov. Frank J. Lausche in November. Lausche, who asks a third term, didn't even campaign against two opponents in the Democratic Party. His renomination is certain.

The two who opposed Lausche were Clarence H. Knisley, a former Rent Controls End June 25, Virginia Informed by U. S.

Richmond, Va., May 2 (AP).—Virginia was assured by the Federal Government today that rent controls in the State will be removed as of June 25.

This information was received today by Col. E. Griffith Dodson, clerk of the Virginia House of Delegates and Keeper of the Rolls, in a letter from Tighe Woods, Federal Housing Expediter.

Woods' letter removed a lingering question as to whether, because of the effective date of the Virginia Decontrol Act, notice could be served on the housing expediter in time to make the expected decontrol date of June 25.

Legislation to remove Federal rent control and repeal State controls was passed by the 1950 General Assembly. June 10 was made the effective date of the law.

Robeson Elected to Congress In Special Race in Virginia

Newport News, Va., May 2 (AP).—Edward J. Robeson, jr., a political newcomer with a "big business" background, tonight upset the regular Democratic politicians by winning the First District Virginia congressional election.

With nearly complete returns in from the district's polling places Robeson held a decisive lead of about 3000 votes over his fellow-Democrat, William A. Wright of Tappahannock, director of the State Conservation Department.

Blake T. Newton of Westmoreland, third Democrat in the four-way race to succeed the late Representative S. Otis Bland for the rest of this year in Congress, was third. The lone Republican candidate, Nile Straughan, Fredericksburg businessman, was a poor fourth.

Wright, a long-time member of the customarily dominant Democratic organization, proved to be correct in his campaign assertions that Robeson was the man he had to beat if he were to be elected.

But Wright and Newton, also identified with the regular party leadership, fought one another in the upper and middle areas of the long coastal district. They split a vote that if cast for a single candidate would probably have been enough to overcome the big hometown business and shipbuilding labor vote won largely by Robeson in the Newport News area.

Robeson drew heavily on both business and labor for his support. He recently retired as vice president and personnel manager of the giant Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. but still heads the Virginia Association of Manufacturers.

Returns from all but nine of the district's 165 precincts showed: Robeson 10,357, Wright 7361, Newton 5270 and Straughan 1579.

Lattimore Hurls Lie At Accusers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In seething, searing words, Owen Lattimore yesterday turned on his attackers, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) and former Communist Louis F. Budenz.

He called the first one a criminal libeler, one who "lied, distorted and vilified," debased the processes of the Senate and "disgraced his party and the people of his State and Nation."

He called Budenz a "paid informer and unscrupulous fingerman," a deliberate, knowing liar, either malicious or pathological, and an "extremely disgusting" person.

Then, in 15,000 words of testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, Lattimore set out to prove what he said—that McCarthy and Budenz knew their accusations were not true, and that the accusations themselves were patently and demonstrably false.

Four Main Points

The Johns Hopkins professor and writer on Far Eastern affairs devoted himself to four main points:

1. That the evidence available clearly proves the groundlessness—and, in fact, the impossibility—of the specific incidents that Budenz cited in previous testimony to show Lattimore was a Communist or subject to Communist control, or that he carried out Communist orders.

2. That the evidence overwhelmingly refutes the original McCarthy charges that Lattimore followed the Communist line in his writings, and in his activities as an editor, consultant, lecturer, advisor and wartime Federal official.

3. That Budenz erected the "screen of lies" relating to Lattimore for the most "sordid" purpose—personal advantage for his "spectacular career" of writing and lecturing about communism.

4. That the kind of attack to which he, Lattimore, was subjected was impairing "fundamental values" of freedom of opinion and freedom of research: that if the "atmosphere of intimidation" that already haunts research work is allowed to continue there will result a "breaking of the spirit of free men that is fatal to our society."

The bulk of Lattimore's original statement, which took an entire morning to deliver, was devoted to the first two points.

Not even McCarthy's "own procured witnesses" were willing to support the charge that Lattimore was "the top Russian espionage agent in the United States," or "one of the top agents, or even a Soviet agent," he pointed out.

Furthermore, "a reading of the record fails to show that any witness—not even Budenz—directly charged that I was a member of the Communist Party."

Lattimore scoffed at the charges, which McCarthy never even attempted to document, that Lattimore had a desk and phone in the State Department. He added he never joined any organization branded by the Attorney General

Senate Vote Is Sought on Crime Probe

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate today may authorize an all-encompassing investigation into interstate crime, including its "corrupting influence" on American politics.

Late yesterday the Senate by unanimous agreement began considering the long-delayed Kefauver resolution for a special five-man committee with a $150,000 budget. The committee would report by next February 28.

A single Senator may block a vote, however, by calling for a return to consideration of the ECA bill. Senator Kem (R., Mo.) last night appeared to be the key man. On the one hand he wants to make an ECA speech today but on the other he wants the Senate to investigate the much-publicized but never solved 1947 ballot thefts in Kansas City, his home town, which is currently immersed in a major grand jury crime inquiry.

The Senate will meet at 11 a. m. today in hopes of a vote on the probe before returning to the Marshall Plan bill late in the afternoon.

Republicans were put on something of a spot by Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.) after the Kefauver resolution was taken up. Lucas once again denied trying to block the probe resolution and declared he favored all the money and other things Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) might need as the prospective committee chairman.

"Anyone delaying action," Lucas declared, "will have to take the responsibility."

Lucas' remarks were aimed chiefly at the two Missouri Republican Senators, Kem and Donnell. Donnell refused to agree to a 1 p. m. voting time today but said he wanted to talk for only about two hours, a minimum for him.

Lucas needled Kem as to his great interest in Missouri crime. Yet, Lucas indicated, Kem in effect was threatening to block any investigation by bringing up his ECA amendment and speaking on it. Senator Saltonstall (R., Mass.) attempted to mediate and asked for the early meeting today, obviously in the hope of calling off Kem before then.

Keafuver promised that if he should head such a committee there would be extensive staff work

Erickson's Office In New York Raided

New York, May 2 (AP).—Detectives operating out of District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's office staged a raid on the Manhattan office of Frank Erickson, admitted gambler, authorative sources said tonight.

The raid followed by only a few days Erickson's appearance before a Senate Commerce Sub-Committee studying a proposal to bar the interstate transmission of information about gambling.

Quick Action Puts 2 A.M. Changeover Into Effect

Nearby Area Set To Join District; Fast-Time Bill Swiftly Enacted

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Metropolitan Washington will go daylight saving time at 2 a. m. Thursday.

High-speed collaboration by Congress, President Truman, and the District Commissioners yesterday gave Washington the signal for its first midweek shift to fast time.

Surrounding communities are prepared to join in officially, but in Fairfax County the time change will be made in practice but not in law.

Senate approval for a one-year-only District DST bill passed by the House on Monday was obtained at the request of District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) shortly after noon. Rush handling got the measure to the White House at 4 p. m.

President Truman signed the bill at 5 p. m.

The District Commissioners, within minutes, gave their announcement of the 2 a. m. Thursday hour for shifting the clocks.

At that moment, the time of Washington will suddenly be 3 a. m. And the "fast time" will continue in force here until 2 a. m., September 24, when the time will suddenly become 1 a. m.

The hour of sleep lost tonight will be paid back the night of September 23-September 24.

For the summer, Washington will be synchronized with other major eastern cities, which forged ahead of the Nation's Capital in time last Sunday with a 2 a. m. shift to DST.

In Alexandria, Arlington County and Falls Church, Va., the local governments had acted in advance to synchronize their clocks with the District whenever the District made the shift. So their change to DST at 2 a. m. Thursday will be automatic.

The same is true in Montgomery County.

In Prince Georges County, Harry W. McNamee, chairman of the board of county commissioners, said he will issue a proclamation today to have the county shift to DST at 2 a. m. Thursday.

In Fairfax County, the Board of Supervisors is expected in its meeting today to order county employes to report for work an hour early starting Thursday—an unofficial shift to a daylight saving schedule. They are also expected to authorize advertisements of an ordinance that would put DST into effect officially about six weeks from now.

District Chairman Neely asked unanimous consent to bring up the House-approved bill and said if it took longer than two minutes he would withdraw the request.

The bill was passed without objection.

Truman, Cabinet to Welcome Pakistan Premier Here Today

President Truman and his Cabinet expect to go to the National Airport this afternoon to greet Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan, leader of the most populous Moslem country in the world.

The Prime Minister and his wife, with official aides, are coming on a good-will visit that will take them from coast to coast and from the Gulf of Mexico to New England.

They took off from London yesterday in the President's plane, the Independence, and are scheduled to land here at 4 p. m.

Liaquat Ali will get all the official honors that come to a head of a government, just as Prime Minister Nehru of India did last year. He will find a guard of honor awaiting him at the airport; he will hear a speech of welcome from the President, and he will drive off with the President to Blair House for his first night on American soil.

The motorcade from the airport to Blair House is expected to cross Memorial Bridge about 4:30, and then travel east on Constitution ave., north on 17th st., east on E st., and north on W. Executive ave. to Pennsylvania ave.

Tonight the visitors will be guests of the President and Mrs. Truman at a small state dinner at Blair House. Thursday the Prime Minister will address both houses of Congress, will visit Mount Vernon and Arlington Cemetery, and will start a busy round of meetings and ceremonies.

Government officials here are ready to roll out a rich red carpet for him, and are anxious to show their respect for his country and for himself.

They give him credit equally with Prime Minister Nehru of India for easing a whole series of Pakistan-India quarrels that threatened earlier this year to lead to war.

Liaquat Ali comes here fresh from having reached an agreement with Nehru, dealing with the trade war that virtually paralyzed business between the neighboring countries. The two leaders agreed last week to lift the barriers on the movement of goods amounting to about 35 million dollars.

Among the items that will start moving across the frontiers are raw jute from Pakistan and jute manufactures from India, as well as fine cotton, textiles, steel sheets, timber, cement, woolen manufactures and tobacco.

American officials hope to see these agreements widened, and hope, especially, that Pakistan and India can settle the bitterest of all their quarrels over possession of the state of Kashmir in the Himalayas.

Liaquat Ali was trained at Oxford and speaks excellent English; he had half a lifetime of political experience in India before the partition of 1947 that set up Pakistan as an independent nation. His wife, the Begum, holds a master's degree in economics from Lucknow University, and has been a champion of women's rights in a country that long denied them.

Hoffman Sees Red Rigidity Causing Loss of Satellites

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Soviet satellite countries will "crack, and crack quite suddenly," under the mounting "tension" and "rigidity" of the Russian economy, Paul G. Hoffman declared yesterday.

Said the Marshall Plan chief before an overflow audience attending the United States Chamber of Commerce annual meeting here:

"Eleven years ago we had three dictators to worry about—Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. Two are gone, and I expect to live long enough to see the third one go."

The death of Stalin, he said, will lead to the breakaway of Communist-dominated countries from Moscow control.

In a brisk question and answer period, Hoffman elaborated on his prediction, explained that rigidity behind the Iron Curtain made satellite economies appear "smooth on the surface, but they are kept so by political brutality." Never-

Powerful Air Offensive Force Forged in Carolina Operation

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Camp Mackall, N. C., May 2.—America has forged a powerful, new offensive force during airborne field tests here the past week which should be maintained as a permanent organization.

That was the major conclusion voiced by Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad and other chiefs of Operation Swarmer at a critique held today. They proposed staging another and bigger maneuver, bringing in the Navy, to work out the technique of projecting an airborne-spearheaded invasion overseas.

Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, top Army commander here, said such a "triphibious" operation offers the best prospect of making a successful assault against an enemy coast in the atomic age.

Norstad, deputy chief of the Air Force and commander of the joint maneuvers now winding up, said he would recommend the creation of a permanent airborne corps and supporting tactical air force.

This would include "at least" the two airborne divisions taking part in Swarmer—the 11th and 82d—under Hodge's Fifth Corps, and the establishment of Brig. Gen. Willard R. (Curly) Wolfinbarger's tactical air division at Pope Air Force base, as an operational concern with its own forces.

"We should have the major elements of an airborne task force and what it takes to make it work in being," said Norstad.

He told reporters that the paratroop-airlift-air support forces blended together for the present maneuver provides the means for launching quick, powerful thrusts at an enemy. One of the purposes of the maneuver was to test the feasibility of opening an "airhead" and supplying it indefinitely by air.

Stassen Brands Truman 'Worst President Ever'

New York, May 2 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen tonight called President Truman "the cleverest politician" and "the worst President ever to occupy the White House."

He said Mr. Truman is embarking on a political tour of the West "to try and get a puppet Congress."

Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania and former Governor of Minnesota, said Mr. Truman "is the cleverest politician ever to occupy the White House" and called on Republicans to "meet the 1950 situation brought about by . . . his use and misuse of the great power of his office" by:

1. "Fighting back vigorously and hitting hard in the exposure of the conditions of his Administration."

2. "Bringing forward definite, sound, constructive measures to meet the problems of our country at home and abroad."

Stassen said the President "will travel across the Nation in a special train, with his trip paid for out of the taxes of the people.

"He will go out to the Grand Coulee Dam; the plans for which were prepared under President Hoover; the construction of which was carried on by President Roosevelt; the payment for which was voted overwhelmingly by both Republicans and Democrats; and standing at the edge of that dam he will strike a pose and act as if he built it with his own little Missouri hands.

"He will act as if he came to the State of Washington for a ceremony to start the generating power at the dam, whereas in fact, he is going there to try to generate more political power behind his Democratic Senator of that State who is in trouble because of playing on the sands of Hollywood

Maragon Gets 8 to 24 Months; Out on Bail

Harris & Ewing
MR. AND MRS. MARAGON
Embraces wife after sentence

John Maragon was sentenced yesterday to serve eight months to two years in prison for lying to the Senate's 5 percenter investigations last year about his bank accounts and employment.

Federal Judge Jennings Bailey imposed the minimum sentence on the one-time White House habitue who was accused by the Senate investigations subcommittee of using his influence with Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, to further his own career as a Washington "fixer."

The 82-year-old jurist, who ordered Maragon jailed last Wednesday after his conviction on two counts of perjury, also released him today in $5000 bail pending appeal.

Maragon raised the neccessary bond in less than five minutes and hurried off to his suburban home at McLean, Va., after offering thanks to "thousands of friends" for their support and to the press for its "fair treatment" during his trial.

The District of Columbia code under which Maragon was convicted specifies punishment of 2 to 10 years for each count of perjury. Judge Bailey reduced the sentence to 8 months to 2 years under the so-called indeterminate sentence procedure which gives a prisoner two thirds off for good behavior. He also directed that the sentences on the two counts run concurrently.

Judge Bailey first indicated that he would not free Maragon on bail, noting: "I have absolutely no doubt of the guilt of this man."

He changed his mind and granted the bail only after a strong plea by Maragon's lawyer, Irving Goldstein, for his freedom pending appeal. The attorney promised he would file the appeal promptly possibly today.

Goldstein reminded the judge hat many defendants recently convicted of "more serious" crimes ad been released in bail. He listed Alger Hiss, Judith Coplon, the 11 Communist leaders convicted in New York and Tokyo Rose (Mrs. Iva Toguri D'Aquino).

He also cited the action of Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court in releasing Tokyo Rose after she had been denied bail by the trial court.

Judge Bailey finally agreed to set Maragon free after Charles B. Murray, assistant United States attorney wheo prosecuted the case, suggested the $5000 bail.

Mrs. Maragon sat quietly in the courtroom as her husband was sentenced and rushed up to embrace him after his bail had been arranged.

Adler Gets Key Circular Out of Record

Hartford, Conn., May 2 (AP).—Larry Adler, harmonica virtuoso, today won a point in his fight to prove that "guilt by association is an un-American principle."

Federal Judge J. Joseph Smith ordered stricken from the record a circular which pictured him and Paul Draper, dancer, as having "enthusiastically supported" an alleged Communist school.

The court, however, ruled that the circular could be marked for identification and that it might be taken up later.

The circular of the Abraham Lincoln School of Chicago was introduced yesterday by counsel for Mrs. Hester McCullough, Greenwich, Conn., housewife and defendant in a $200,000 libel suit brought by Adler and Draper. They claim she accused them of pro-Communist activities.

Argument on the motion to exclude the circular was heard by Judge Smith today with the jury excluded. Frederick H. Wiggin, attorney for the entertainers, argued that the circular was valueless in proving his clients were pro-Communist, and that it was an attempt to prove guilt by association.

"Beliefs are personal and not a matter of association." Wiggin told the court. "I'm not defending communism; I hate communism as much as anyone hates it."

Wiggin argued that if the entertainers gave a Carnegie Hall performance "to send milk to some in Toulouse," but the officers of the organization staging the benefit had other ideas, the ideas could not be charged to Adler and Draper.

The judge asked MacDonald Dewitt, defense attorney, whether he intended to bring in proof of the school's Communist affiliation. It had been listed by former Attorney General Tom Clark as a Communist institution.

Dewitt replied that he proposed to bring in direct evidence in connection with each of the alleged Communist front organizations which Mrs. McCullough has said the entertainers "openly supported."

Hawaii Reds 'In Tailspin,' Senate Told

By The Associated Press

Communism is in a tailspin in Hawaii, Representative Walter (D., Pa.) told a Senate committee yesterday.

Walter headed a special subcommittee of the House Un-American Activities Committee which recently returned from an investigation of communism in Hawaii. He testified before the Senate Insular Affairs Committee at a hearing on the House-passed bill to grant statehood to Hawaii.

Walter said his committee concluded that at no time were there more than 160 Communists in Hawaii; that the maximum was reached in 1946, and that the number has dwindled to not more than 90 now.

He conceded the Communists had infiltrated into the Democratic Party.

This, he said, is understandable, because the party was not strong and not well organized.

55,000 Communists In U. S., Says FBI Head

New York, May 2 (AP).—FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover said tonight there are about 55,000 "traitorous Communists" in the United States, members of a "well-knit, closely disciplined, destructive force."

In addition, he said, there are approximately half a million "hypocrites and moral swindlers" in the Nation who can be classified as fellow travelers and Communist sympathizers, "ready to do the Communist bidding."

He called fellow travelers "extremely dangerous to the internal security of this Nation."

McCarthy Lies, Says Lattimore

as subversive, never attended any meetings in the house of a known Communist—as was to have been the testimony of a McCarthy witness who turned up missing.

McCarthy's Political Past

With a crack at McCarthy's political past, Lattimore said: "My life and works speak for themselves. Unlike McCarthy, I have never been charged with a violation of the laws of the United States or the ethics of my profession." The reference was to McCarthy's senatorial campaign conducted before he resigned his post as a judge in Wisconsin.

"I have never been accused, as McCarthy has been, of income-tax evasion, of the destruction of records that were in my official custody, or of improperly using an official position for the purpose of advancing my own fortunes, political or otherwise."

He then addressed himself to the Budenz charge that he was given the "general direction" of organizing writers and influencing them to portray Chinese Communists as simply agrarian reformers.

Lattimore recalled that Budenz implied that while Lattimore was doing this, he must have had special indulgence to criticize the Communist Party, and support programs, such as the Marshall Plan and aid of Finland, that were anathema to it.

Says Budenz Contradicts

According to Budenz' argument, as pictured by Lattimore, "I was indulgently allowed to say and write as I did that the spread of direct Russian control over Asia would be disastrous. . . .

"But Budenz in his book . . . directly contradicts this hypothesis. He says on page 234 that a Communist will never be permitted to express one word of reservation or criticism of the Soviet government, its leaders or their decisions. . . .

"But according to Budenz, I was such a tremendous big shot—even if I was just a fellow who was organizing writers—that I got all these special favors. . . . I submit that this is an absurd fabrication."

The only concrete evidence of Lattimore's alleged Communist activities cited by Budenz, Lattimore noted, was that the "order" to portray Chinese Communists as simple peasant reformers was carried out.

The evidence shows such an "order" was never carried out, Lattimore said, citing the articles that appeared in the publication he edited, Pacific Affairs. During his tenure, the magazine published two articles by a man that Lattimore later discovered was a Communist. It carried a total of nine articles by writers considered leftist, or 2½ percent of the total 250 articles published. Of these, 94 were "definitely right of center," and the rest without political content.

Pacific Affairs used the term "agrarian reformer" only once, in a translation of a piece which an editor's note pointed out represented the Chinese Communist point of view.

After the Communists changed their line in 1943 and decided, according to Budenz, to be hostile to Chiang Kai-shek, Lattimore vigorously supported him, called him a "world-statesman of real genius," and said, "Chiang never became a dictator or a fascist."

At this time, the Daily Worker, which Budenz edited, was denouncing Chiang, Lattimore pointed out through quotations. Was his position in support of Chiang, Lattimore asked, "another special exemption? Is Budenz' 'proof' that I was subject to the party's order the fact that I did eactly the opposite?"

Calls Budenz a Liar

If Budenz, as he testified, was instructed to follow Lattimore's advice, why didn't he, like a good Communist member, Lattimore asked.

If he had been following the line of what Lattimore was writing, the Daily Worker "would have been proposing measures to support democratic government in China and to halt the spread of communism there."

Lattimore said the entire story of Budenz that he was told, officially, that Lattimore was a Communist, was in his view a fabrication, and that Budenz "is either a plain old-fashioned liar or he is a pathological liar."

If Budenz knew Lattimore to be such an important Communist, why in five years since Budenz left the Communist Party had he never said so or even mentioned Lattimore's name in his two books, a magazine piece explicity devoted to Communist influence in China, in testimony before a dozen Federal agencies, and in the "many hours" he spent with FBI agents, Lattimore asked.

Recalls Collier's Incident

He referred to an editorial conference a year ago between Budenz and a Collier's magazine editor, the transcript of which shows that Budenz explicity stated Lattimore was not a Communist agent.

In the light of all this, Lattimore concluded, Budenz's assertions were not only an invention, but a recent invention. As of a few months ago when Budenz wrote his last articles and book, "the simple inescapable fact must be that Budenz did not know or think of me as a Communist agent or even as a fellow traveler; that he concocted this entire spider's web of lies only after he heard the call to the colors, sounded by McCarthy or Budenz's old friend, (Alfred) Kohlberg."

Now, Lattimore noted, Budenz indicated he is preparing a list of 40 names of other Communists or sympathizers. Why has he not named them before this, Lattimore asked.

"I cannot believe that the American Government or the American people will permit this man to convert his thriving retail business into a wholesale enterprise . . . We cannot allow this man to run wild any longer."

Uses Many Quotations

The section Lattimore devoted to showing that his writings most certainly did not follow the Communist Party line with respect to China and the Far East was replete with quotations. He showed that as the Communist position rigged and zagged, he followed a consistent position.

Most usually, it was in outright opposition to the Communist themes, Lattimore demonstrated. When it coincided with the party policy, he argued, it was coincidental, if as America and Britain were fighting Hitler when Russia was that was no proof America and Britain were Communist at the time, he contended

Lattimore's clincher was a story, documentation of which he supplied, never told before. In 1943, when the Communist line by Budenz's and McCarthy's testimony was one of hostility to Ching, Lattimore was asked to accept a personal gift of $5000 from Chiang and Madame Chiang.

Lattimore said he did not know what the motives were in offering him the gift, "but I doubt very much that it indicated that the Nationalist government, which should have known my views, believed that I was a Communist agent." He declined the gift.

"I did believe for a long time," Lattimore said, "—longer than the facts justified, I am afraid—in the ability of Chiang Kai-shek to stop the advance of communism by instituting a few necessary reforms. . . . General Marshall recognized the futility of this hope before I did; and finally, in 1947, I followed General Marshall in accepting the fact that the Kuomintang was beyond salvage."

Lattimore conceded he should have recognized the reality before Marshall; possessing more specialized knowledge. "But certainly, my error was in exactly the opposite direction from the Communist position. As you know, during this period the Communists were howling for Chiang's blood."

During the afternoon session, under cross examination by Senator Hickenlopper (R., Iowa), Lattimore was asked to account for Budenz's motive, if he was as charged, deliberately lying. Lattimore read back a section of his testimony:

"Now consider the kind of career that Budenz has been following for five years. He has made himself a sensational author and lecturer by exploiting his own past. But the past is the past, and he must be haunted by the fact that his tales of skullduggery and conspiracy may grow stale through sheer repetition. Already there have been new sensational revelations by Government agents who have successfully infiltrated the Communist Party, and who have appeared at trials to give their testimony.

"The pressure on Budenz is obvious. When a new sensation breaks out in the press and a man is accused—even if the accusation is false—what is the temptation that is dangled before him? It is the easiest thing in the world for his own memory to be convenient and obliging. He can then rush up and say "I remember him too!"—and thus revive his reputation as the peerless informant."

After the villification he received at Budenz's hands, said Lattimore, "I am not going to attribute to him any charitable motives."

Budenz, in New York, declined to comment on yesterday's testimony.

Most of the afternoon session was given over to a discussion, under questioning by subcommittee counsel Edward Morgan, of various passages in Lattimore's writings. The result was an extended exposition of Lattimore's political views.

Hickenlooper followed with a series of more or less unrelated questions in what appeared to be the process of a fishing expedition.

Beside material already adduced, Hickenlooper brought out first, that Mrs. Lattimore, who said she did ot recall it, had once addressed the Tom Mooney Labor School in San Francisco, and second, that a secretary of Lattimore, for a two-week period in Peking, was the wife of a man who is now a high Chinese Communist official.

Hickenlooper and other members of the subcommittee will continue questioning of Lattimore beginning at 10 a. m. today.

Red Official, Lawyers Guild Hit Mundt Bill

By the United Press

A New York Communist told the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday that the proposed Mundt - Nixon - Ferguson Communist-control bill "is a domestic expression of the bipartisan drive toward war."

Simon W. Gerson, legislative chairman of the Communist Party, Brooklyn, N. Y., said the bill which the committee is considering "might well be described as Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's ravings in legislative form."

Asked by Committee Counsel Frank S. Tavenner if he is a member of the Communist Party, Gerson replied:

"The answer is self-evident. I am a member of the Communist Party. I have been for some time. And I intend to continue to be."

"That," remarked Representative Bernard W. Kearney (R., N. Y.) "is a more forthright answer than this committee usually gets."

Harry G. Lambertson, president of the Washington branch of the National Lawyers Guild, also appeared in opposition to the bill.

He denied he is a member of the Communist Party. But he said he did not believe the committee "has any more right to inquire into my political belief than it has to ask me what my religion is."

Alger Hiss Is Disbarred in New York

New York, May 2 (AP).—Alger Hiss, convicted perjurer and one-time top State Department official, today lost his right to practice law in New York State.

He was disbarred by the Appellate Division of the New York State Supreme Court. The action stemmed from Hiss' perjury conviction.

A Federal Court jury last January found him guilty of swearing falsely that he did not feed United States secrets to Whittaker Chambers, former Communist courier for a prewar Russian spy ring.

He now is free on bail, pending appeal of the conviction. He was sentenced to five years in prison.

Harriman Pledges Full Aid to Berlin

Berlin, May 2 (NYHT).—W. Averell Harriman, roving Ambassador for the Economic Cooperation Administration, pledged today full economic support to West Berlin in its struggle against what he called "the barbarism and the barbaric pressures" coming from the East.

Harriman arrived from Frankfurt with American High Commissioner John J. McCloy to review the economic aid program for Berlin.

Harriman's anger against Russia was aroused by the serious economic plight into which Moscow has plunged this city. High unemployment in West Berlin, Harriman was informed, is due to the stripping of its industry by Soviet troops after the war, the year-long blockade, the division of the city into two hostile parts and repeated Communist threats to seize the Western section.

In 1945, Harriman said, "I saw with my own eyes the vandalism which was perpetrated on your people by the removing of their methods of production."

Harriman said the immediate objective is to create work for 300,000 unemployed. ECA funds released last month made it possible to reemploy 30,000. Harriman said the target was 100,000 by July 1.

The ultimate objective, he said, is to restore Berlin's industry so that the city may become economically stabilized. For this project, 250 million Westmarks will be released to Berlin this year from ECA counterpart funds in West Germany.

Transport, Radio

Time Change To End Many Confusions

Depending on who you are, beginning of daylight saving time here Thursday at 2 a. m. means getting back on schedule, setting thousands of clocks ahead or losing temporarily an hour's pay. To all, it means losing an hour's sleep tonight.

District employes working at 2 a. m. Thursday will lose an hour's pay this week, said District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton. But they'll get an extra hour's pay when the clocks are turned back in September. An official at George Washington University Hospital said she did not think the time change would be reflected in nurses' pay checks there.

Television programs, which have been shown an hour earlier than usual for three days, will be back on schedule, said Jack Hardesty, publicity director at Station WOIC. Radio stations could record and rebroadcast Nation-wide broadcasts originating an hour earlier elsewhere. Television could not. As a result, said Hardesty, his station has been bombarded with calls from persons who missed their favorite programs.

Airlines officials said daylight saving time schedules already distributed will be correct as of Thursday. Since Sunday a plane scheduled to leave National Airport at, say, 5 p. m., daylight saving time, has left at 4 p. m. Washington time.

Officials at Union Station said most through trains have already changed to daylight saving time schedules and that commuters, trains will follow suit. Ralph Adcock, dispatcher at Trailways Bus Co., reported substantially the same situation for bus travel.

Dennis Denied Delay In Serving Sentence

Justice Minton of the Supreme Court refused yesterday to delay jail proceedings against Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communists party.

His action means the high court will notify lower courts that there is no reason, so far as it is concerned, why Dennis should not start serving his one year sentence for contempt of Congress. A lower court judge could still issue a stay of jail proceedings if he wished.

Alleged Marriage of Colonel In Italy Termed Not 'Regular'

FIGURE IN TRIAL—Jonilde Bruno, 27, carrying son, 18-month-old Boris, arrives at First Battalion headquarters in Fort Myer, Va., to testify in the court martial of Col. Ralph C. Tilley. The prosecution contends the colonel married Miss Bruno in Italy

The alleged bigamous marriage of a Pentagon colonel and an Italian woman was not a "regular" marriage and was merely "registered" to give her child a name, according to depositions made at the colonel's court martial yesterday.

The depositions contradicted yesterday's testimony by the woman, Jonilde Bruno, 27, who claimed she married Col. Ralph C. Tilley in the belief he was divorced from his American wife.

Colonel Tilley is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer, as a bigamist, and with conduct prejudicial to the service in having harbored an alien in this country.

The prosecution contends that Tilley, now attached to the Adjutant General's Office, married Miss Bruno in Italy while he was serving there and brought her to this country in 1948 on a passport representing her as his wife.

Col. Tilley, who is 54, lives in Falls Church with his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Tilley.

Miss Bruno Appears

Miss Bruno appeared at the trial, held at First Battalion headquarters in Fort Myer, Va., with the 18-month-old son, Boris, who, she claims, was fathered by Tilley.

The presence of the child was objected to by Defense Attorney George J. Banigan of New York.

Miss Bruno testified that the banns were published in the City Hall at La Spezia, where she lived, 15 days before her marriage on October 29, 1947 to Colonel Tilley. After the marriage, she said, Colonel Tilley always used the name "Mrs. Tilley" in introducing her.

They were not married in a church because she did not have time to obtain the necessary documents and because Tilley, as a "divorced" man, could not have a church marriage, she testified.

"Mrs. Brown"

After her testimony, Sergt. Alex Bolser, now stationed at Fort Totten, N. Y., said he had met Miss Bruno in Italy in March, 1947, when he was serving under Colonel Tilley. He testified she called herself "Mrs. Major Brown" and said she was the wife of an American officer stationed in Trieste.

Depositions from several Italians declared they had known the young woman in Italy in 1947 as "Mrs. Brown."

In other depositions, Maria Stuttgart and her daughter, Miranda, said Jonilde Bruno told them she wanted Col. Tilley to give his name to her prospective child.

The case is expected to be concluded today.

Stockpiling Studied for Surgical Goods

Federal stockpiling of surgical supplies outside likely target cities for atom bomb attack on the United States is under "serious consideration," it was reported here yesterday.

The security planning measure was revealed by Dr. Norvin C. Kiefer, director of the health resources division of the National Security Resources Board.

Other preparedness measures outlined by Dr. Kiefer included short first-aid courses geared to train some 20 million civilians in A-bomb casualty work, planning for the emergency conversion of schools and other public buildings into casualty hospitals, and organizing a Nation-wide network of mobile and fixed medical teams and stations.

"None of us like to think of atomic warfare, but we'd be foolish to be unprepared for it," Dr. Kiefer told a meeting of Federal hospital managers.

He spoke at final week sessions of the Inter-Agency Institute for Hospital Managers, at the Army Medical Center here. So 32 top administrators in Government hospitals are attending the Army-sponsored sessions.

Discussing the need for Federal purchase and stockpiling of surgical supplies, Dr. Kiefer said that no city in the Nation could meet the needs if subjected to atom bombing "even like that of Hiroshima, Japan." Today's atom bombs, he pointed out, could be even more destructive.

Backs Draft Act

Situation Is Bad, Says Gen. Bradley

In a new plea for extension of the draft act, Gen. Omar N. Bradley said yesterday that recent world events add up to "a very bad situation."

"There has been no letup in the aggressive extension of communism toward its goal of world domination," the chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff told the House Armed Services Committee.

He hastened to add he hoped no one would consider him guilty of warmongering because he was just "summing up what has been said in the newspapers."

He was the first witness as the House committee opened hearings on prolonging the life of the Selective Service Act, now due to expire June 24.

Although no one has been drafted under it since January, 1949, officials want to keep it on the books because they say it will save time in case of emergency.

The committee chairman, Representative Vinson (D., Ga.) recommended that the group aprove a two-year extension, but with a new proviso forbidding any actual inductions unless Congress gives permission by passing a resolution.

The committee decided to put off action until it gets further information at a closed door meeting today. Bradley will be called back then, along with Secretary of Defense Johnson, Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of the Army Pace.

MacArthur Attacks Jap Reds

Tokyo, May 2 (AP).—General MacArthur today called Japan's Communist Party "an avowed satellite of an international predatory force" and again raised the question of whether it should be outlawed.

The occupation commander's observations were made in a statement on the third anniversary of Japan's democratic constitution. He first questioned the party's right to legal status 10 months ago.

The top Russian in Japan, meanwhile, formally asked MacArthur to explain "the reconstruction of former Japanese naval and air bases."

The request was made by letter by Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, head of the Soviet mission, who charged rehabilitation of key bases occupied by American forces is contrary to occupation policies laid down by the Far Eastern Commission.

MacAuthor praised the Japanese for their "political progress under the established norms of representative democracy."

"And as Japan goes, so in due time may go all of Asia," he said. "For men will come to see in Japan's bill of rights and resulting social progress the antidote to many of Asia's basic ills."

Then he turned to the Communists. He called the party "a small minority which, through the perversive use of liberty and privilege, seeks to encompass freedom's destruction."

MacArthur reminded the Japanese that an even smaller minority, the militarists, led them into a war and disaster.

He said the Communists sought to lull the Japanese "into an even greater disaster—this time without even the pretense of service to legitimate national ends, but under foreign dictation to establish a domestic basis favorable to the ultimate subjugation of Japan to the political control of others."

Nationalists Admit Reds Hold Hainan

Taipei, Formosa (Wednesday), May 3 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists today officially conceded the Reds had conquered Hainan Island but said they had evacuated troops and supplies with "better results than expected."

A government statement said the last Nationalist unit was embarked from the south coast port of Yulin on Monday.

It did not say how many troops were withdrawn, but declared they would be used in areas where the Communists would have to fight under less favorable circumstances (presumably Formosa and its screening islands).

The statement asserted the Reds suffered far heavier losses on Hainan than the defenders.

Previously, authorities disclosed 1284 persons were arrested in a big Red hunt on Formosa Sunday.

U. S. Rejects Israel Plea For Arms Aid

NYHT News Service

The State and Defense Departments have come to the conclusion that Israel is in no immediate danger of aggression from the Arab states and that the Israeli request for assistance in the purchase of modern arms should not be granted at this time, it was learned yesterday.

This politically explosive decision will not be revealed publicly. Instead, the State Department will continue to say that the request by Israel for the granting of export licenses for up-to-date weapons is still "under consideration."

At the same time the Defense establishment is vigorously defending the action of Great Britain in sending modern tanks, jet-propelled military planes and other equipment to Egypt. The Pentagon view is that the flow of arms from Britain to the Arab states is "in the strategic interest of the United States." This view has considerable support in the State Department.

Assertions that Israel enjoys military superiority over the Arab states were labeled "absolutely fantastic" by a spokesman of the Israeli Embassy.

Ban A-Bombs International Red Cross Asks

Geneva, May 2 (AP).—A world-wide appeal to outlaw atomic weapons was launched today by the International Red Cross Committee.

The appeal was sent to practically all the world's governments April 20 and published for the first time here today by Paul Ruegger, committee president.

It asked the governments to take "all steps to reach an agreement on the prohibition of atomic weapons and, in a general way, of all nondirected missiles."

The committee asked governments which signed the 1949 Geneva war conventions to ban atomic weapons and nondirected missiles "as a logical complement" to the Geneva conventions.

The committee, composed entirely of Swiss citizens, supervises the Geneva convention for the protection of soldiers and civilians in wartime.

Liberal Party Rejects Bid By Churchill

London, May 2 (NYHT.)—Only an unqualified Conservative pledge of electoral reform will win the Liberal Party to Winston Churchill's proposal for a united front against the Labor government, it was learned today.

The Conservative invitation was rejected today following a conference of Liberal leaders.

Clement Davies, Liberal leader in Commons, issued a statement saying: "The Liberal Party Committee assures Liberals in the country that it has no intention of compromising the independence of the Liberal Party."

Despite this, it was learned that within the party hierarchy there exists a strong middle-of-the-road group which would support a common front agreement with Churchill at the next election if the flat pledge of electoral reform, involving some form of proportional representation were tendered.

An alliance between the two parties probably would come close to breaking Labor's power at the next election. It would be a simple matter to withdraw candidates of either party in strategic constituencies and avoid splitting the antigovernment vote.

Lord Fairfax Will Arrive In Prince Georges Co. Friday

Thomas Lord Fairfax, youngest member of the British House of Lords, will arrive in Prince Georges County, Md., Friday to arrange for management of the 900-acre estate, Northampton, which he recently inherited.

The spacious farm, with house, near Largo was laid out with gardens and terraces by Maj. Pierre L'Enfant, architect of Washington. It was bought during the Civil War by an earlier Lord Fairfax.

It was willed to the late Clarence M. Roberts and his wife, Mrs. Frances Fairfax Roberts, who died April 21. Mrs. Roberts was the sister of the 12th Lord Fairfax. There was a stipulation that it would pass to the eldest son of the nobleman, who died in 1939, on the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts.

Thus the present Lord Fairfax, 27 years old and a bachelor, will come to settle details of the management of Northampton. Whether British laws will permit him to keep it in his name is one legal matter to be settled.

Fairfax's attorney, T. Hammond Welsh, jr., of Lanham, said the nobleman will bring with him his younger brother, Peregrine. The elder is known to kin in Maryland as "Tommy." Both have visited America in the last two years. They will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Roberts, who inherited the nearby Inglewood estate on the death of Mrs. Frances Fairfax Roberts.

Tariff Cuts to Boost Imports Opposed as Peril to Workers

Labor-management opponents of the Administration's program to increase imports yesterday launched their counterattack on Capitol Hill.

A special House subcommittee on the effects of imports on employment heard the Government's import program denounced as a move which will bring about widespread unemployment and reduction in wages for American workers.

First shot of the import foes was fired by O. R. Strackbein, chairman of the recently formed National Labor-Management Council on Foreign Trade Policy, which advocates it own program of "reasonable" tariffs.

Strackbein said the State Department's move to help western European countries earn more American dollars by lowering our import duties was fraught with danger to the American standard of living.

"Protectionism," Strackbein declared, has long been looked upon as the instrument of the "robber barons," who sought high tariffs in order to maintain monopolies in this country.

The House Labor Committee's special subcommittee, headed by Representative Tom Steed (D., Okla.), will continue hearings at 2 p. m. today.

Columbia Dedicates Atom Research Center

Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., May 2 (AP).—Columbia University's new nuclear physics research center, including a cyclotron or atom-smasher described as the world's most powerful, was dedicated today.

The 385-million-volt cyclotron is on a 67-acre estate 20 miles north of New York.

Stricken Mayor Better

Mosinee, Wis., May 2 (AP).—Mayor Ralph Kronenwetter, who suffered a stroke last night as Mosinee's mock Communist uprising reached a climax, was reported still unconscious but slightly improved late today.

FEPC Given Priority In Senate Next Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) yesterday gave the hotly controversial Fair Employment Practices bill priority over all other legislation in the Senate starting next week.

His announcement, following a Democratic policy committee meeting, ran into expected warnings of a Southern filibuster and a cross-fire of proposals to substitute other legislation.

More Pressing Bills

Southern committee chairmen, with major bills pending, served notice they would move shortly for FEPC's displacement. Some Republicans nominally friendly to the measure said they considered a few other bills more pressing.

Thus the Lucas motion appeared likely to run into a sharp floor fight from the moment he makes it—immediately following passage of the Economic Cooperation administration bill Friday night.

Whether he can call up the bill or hold it before the Senate if the first cloture test fails, was subject to these pressures in the Senate's converging legislative jam:

1. Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio), told the Senate all the President's reorganization plans would become law by default if the Senate debates FEPC beyond May 23. Taft strongly hinted he would oppose Lucas' motion unless some of the reorganization resolutions are guaranteed a vote.

McClellan to Act

2. Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark), chairman of the Expenditures Committee handling the reorganization plans, announced he will move to call up favorably reported resolutions blocking two reorganization plans "if no one else does." He predicted the Senate will be called on to vote on at least eight others before May 23.

3. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Finance Committee handling the House-passed social security expansion bill, announced it will be reported to the Senate before next mid-week. He said he will move "two or three days later" to call it up "regardless of what bill is before the Senate," in order to speed social security to a House-Senate conference.

Southern Senators, who have kept a man on the Senate floor every minute since the session's start to spot any FEPC move, simply repeated that they will do everything in their power to block the bill.

Among other bills that will be thrown into the fight, in their effort to displace the civil rights measure, may be the vote-getting conference report on the omnibus flood control bill, the popular Commodity Credit Corporation bill, and the bitterly contested basing point (freight absorption) conference report, it was learned.

To Fight Every Delay

Lucas, who has been criticized by minority groups for postponing Senate FEPC action since the start of the session, said he will fight every motion to put "anything else" ahead of the key civil rights bill.

He said that went for the Social Security bill and even the highly privileged Government reorganization resolutions. Twenty-one reorganization plans are pending. Each will become law on May 23, unless disapproved by either House.

Lucas said it will take a majority vote to lay aside FEPC for any one of them, and he will oppose every motion to lay aside.

He predicted a cloture petition to shut off the certain filibuster against his motion to call up the FEPC bill will be filed within two or three days after the debate motion.

64 Votes Needed

Under the so-called Wherry rule, 64 Senate votes are needed to invoke cloture. If the initial cloture move wins, Lucas said he plans to permit debate to continue for some time before offering a second cloture motion to force a final vote on the bill.

If the first Lucas motion fails to muster the necessary 64 cloture votes, he said a decision on abandoning the FEPC effort will hinge on how close the vote is. He indicated he will continue to press the FEPC fight if as many as 60 Senators vote for cloture, in hope of a later vote pickup.

Senator Taft, leading opponent of Reorganization Plan No. 12, abolishing the independent NLRB office of general counsel, had previously announced he would move May 10 to call up the resolution blocking that plan.

Taking the floor after Lucas' announcement, Taft warned that reorganization plans "must be vetoed (by Congress) if they are vetoed at all, by May 23.

"I shall certainly appeal to those who are in favor of the resolution (blocking Plan No. 12) to agree to have the Senate take it up, regardless of what measure may then be pending," he told the Senate.

No Choice but Object

He said Lucas' announcement offered Senate opponents of some of the reorganization plans "no choice . . . to do anything but object."

Senator McClellan, whose committee has completed hearings on seven of the reorganization plans, and has unfavorably reported two, said he felt "obligated" to get Senate action on resolutions cleared by his committee.

"In my opposition to FEPC, I would resort to any proper and reasonable advantage I could take," McClellan conceded. "Irrespective of that I don't think FEPC should be used to obstruct these other measures."

Predicting the Senate will be asked to vote "soon" on every-one of the reorganization plans processed by his committee, McClellan hinted that if one motion to displace FEPC fails, the same motion may be offered again and again.

"If there's anything reprehensible about opposing FEPC, as had been charged, it's just as reprehensible to use FEPC to enact these reorganization plans without a vote," the Arkansas Senator told reporters.

Committee Bars 10% TV Tax

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday flatly rejected President Truman's proposal for a 10 percent excise tax on television sets. If approved, the tax would have yielded an estimated 45 million dollars annually.

The Administration had sought to place the same excise tax on television that now applies to radio.

Television manufacturers pleaded that a 10 percent levy would retard the growth of a new industry and cause unemployment.

Meanwhile, the Treasury reported that the Government spent $2,588,186,000 more than it took in during the first 10 months of the current fiscal year.

That deficit is expected to be doubled by the year's end, June 30.

The Treasury report showed that at the start of this month, the Government was three times as deep in the hole as it was at the same point in the preceding year. That year eventually wound up in a deficit of $1,811,000,000.

Revised Administration estimates count on this year's deficit jumping to $5,400,000,000 by June 30 and being followed by a $5,200-000,000 red ink entry for the succeeding 12 months.

The estimated anticipated, therefore, that spending will top revenues by more than $2,800,000,000 during May and June.

Rivers, Harbors Vote Is Delayed by House

Gen. Van Fleet, Greek Mission Head, Named To Represent U. S. at Iran Burial Ceremony

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

President Truman decided yesterday to send Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet instead of a civilian diplomat to represent him this weekend at a ceremony in troubled Iran.

The choice of one of America's fightingest generals, now head of the military mission in Greece, was a symbol of more than ordinary importance. It showed American worry over signs of political, economic and military weakness in the Shah's kingdom.

It suggested, too, that the American armed forces were keeping anxious eyes on Iran, which has strategic importance because of its vast oil fields, its weakly defended frontier with Russia and its geographical position at the entrance to the Indian Ocean.

The ceremony this weekend will be an elaborate re-burial of the remains of Reza Shah Pahlavi, the iron-willed former soldier who made himself a dictator but died in exile during the war. The present Shah, Reza's son, is using this ceremony to strengthen support for himself, now being undermined by land-owners and by Communists alike.

The Soviet Union is sending an impressive delegation to the re-burial rites. Soviet officers will thus rub elbows with General Van Fleet, who, as military adviser to the Greeks, virtually directed the successful war against the Communist guerillas in the past two years.

The young Shah has run into serious troubles since he returned from his official visit to the United States a few months ago. His country is in the grip of an economic depression, brought on partly by crop failures in the grain-raising provinces, and partly by administrative failures in the capital.

Unemployment has risen, business is languishing and the Communist-led Tudeh Party, officially outlawed by the Shah, is doing its utmost to exploit the resultant misery. Unofficially allied to the Communists, though poles apart from them, are the wealthy landlords who have never approved of the Shah's program of stamping out corruption in high places and of modernizing the country.

In these circumstances the retiring Iranian Ambassador, Hussein Ala, yesterday renewed his urgent appeals for American aid during a farewell visit to Willard Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for economic affairs. Ala is on his way home to become the Shah's Foreign Minister.

He got no firm commitment from the State Department.

Meantime, Iran is wide open to Soviet-inspired troublemaking, and is fast becoming a danger spot of Asia. General Van Fleet's mission is at least a sign that the United States is aware of the danger.

Powerful Air Offensive Forged in War Test

Brig. Gen. Gerald J. Higgins, the chief umpire, said it had proved that a "Berlin-type airlift" is entirely feasible with limitations" under tactical conditions.

Norstad indicated that he agreed with this, but said normally such an airhead should be linked up as soon as possible with a land or sea movement.

Hodge told The Washington Post that "the next big step" should be a triphibious operation. He visualized it as follows:

An airfield would be opened perhaps 5 miles behind an enemy-held shore-line. Paratroopers would take off from land air bases 500 to 700 miles from their objective and seized their initial objective—an airstrip.

Warship gun fire and fighter planes, aided by land-based tactical air power further back would support the action.

The airlift would get under way from the paratrooper bases and build up and expand the airhead, capturing as much of the shore line as possible.

Could Speed Out Sea Supply

Then amphibious forces would bring in the heavier equipment and much larger troop forces to move on.

The great advantage of such an operation over amphibious landings is that the sea supply could be spread out and could not be knocked out by a single A-bomb, or even several.

Hodge and the other generals talked of such operations in terms of training exercises, but left no doubt that they were thinking of the "real thing"—an invasion of Europe launched from Iceland, the Azores, or North Africa.

The distance between the launching bases and the airhead of the present operation was only approximately 150 miles, but Norstad said it could be done just as easily for distances of 300 to 500 miles and up a 1000 miles with more difficulty.

Asked if such an operation was possible "across the Mediterranean," he replied, "of course, it's just a pond."

But while Norstad and his aides evidently were convinced that such airborne invasions are practical, they made no secret of the fact that there are some "missing links" now as far as operational forces and equipment are concerned.

"Assault" transports, capable of landing on rough fields, bigger parachutes for dropping heavy weapons, airborne GCA, and larger transports—all tested here—must have the "bugs" eliminated and supplied in some quantity, they said.

Permanent Setup Needed

Norstad said at today's press critique that he had not yet decided whether to recommend creation of a fully organized joint task force but felt that at least something approaching a permanent airborne organization is necessary.

Beyond saying that Wolfinbarger's command should have tactical forces assigned to it, Norstad did not spell out what he had in mind. Until now, both Hodge's V Corps and Wolfinbarger's air unit have been headquarters only, with divisions, air groups, and supporting tactical forces, etc. assigned to them only for maneuvers.

The 43-year-old USAF general evidently is suggesting a partial reversal of the decision of two years ago, which took all actual forces from the tactical air command and made it a subordinate headquarters under continental air command. The latter has actual control of the tactical forces.

Hodge cited two specific lessons learned from the mistakes made during the maneuver. The planners, he said, had not foreseen the need for a "beachmaster" at the airhead in charge of unloading, and the unloading problem was complicated by sending in unnecessary equipment like tents, early in the operation.

Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson, in overall charge of the two divisions in the campagin, said the greatest trouble faced by the paratroopers was enemy tanks. Rocket-firing jet fighters may be the answer to this, he said. General Higgins said this was "one answer" but declared the opposing tanks had "chewed up" the invaders several times when weather grounded the planes. He urged further work on the dropping of anti-tank guns by multiple parachutes.

The chief umpire declared the Berlin airlift technique should be modified for combat conditions to bring in only Fairchild C-119 packets in the early stages, followed by Douglas C-54s and C-74s later on, with supply bundles only. Difficulty in getting vehicles and field guns out of the latter, slowed down unloading considerably.

The C-119, built in Hagerstown, Md., passed its test "with flying colors" and "really proved itself," said Higgins. However, he added, we still need assault transports capable of landing on unprepared fields.

Both Wolfinbarger and Clarkson declared the dropping of forward air controllers with the paratroops had proved a success. The former warned ground commanders that in wartime, the tactical air force probably would not be big enough to give them as much support as during the maneuver when almost all calls for air strikes were met.

Asked if the maneuvers indicated whether we should change the proportion of our airborne and amphibious forces, Norstad replied:

"As of now both are required."

Marshal Graziani Sentenced as War Criminal

Rome, May 2 (U.P.).—Marshal Rodolfo Graziana, former commander in chief of all Fascist armed forces, was sentenced to slightly less than four months in prison today for collaboration with the Nazis.

The ruthless conqueror of Ethiopia, who clung to Benito Mussolini to the end, was found innocent on all other counts, including the murder of hundreds of Italian partisans.

The special military tribunal stripped Graziani of all military honors and prerogatives and sentenced him to 19 years. But the five years and seven days he has spent in jail since April 25, 1945, was lifted from his sentence. The 13 years and eight months' pardon granted him under the postwar amnesty laws reduced his sentence to less than four months.

Food Picture Is Darkening, U. N. Reports

Lake Success, May 2 (NYHT). The world's food situation has taken a turn for the worse, with famine in China and a crop failure which won't let Argentina, one of the world's great grain exporters, even meet its own corn needs, the United Nations announced today.

By contrast, the United States is finding difficulty selling its price-supported food surpluses abroad.

The report disclosed world food output in 1949 had dropped about 5 percent from the year before—from 583 pounds per person for eight major crops to 554.

In Communist-held China, the report said bad weather had seriously affected both rice and wheat crops; serious floods have troubled large areas of the Yellow River and Yangtsze valleys, and drought has hit sections of north China. "As a result, famine may be widespread. Relief cannot be expected until June.

In Argentina, drought has cut the corn crop to less than a fifth of prewar output.

2 East German Police Given U. S. Sentences

Berlin, May 2 (AP).—A United States court today sentenced two members of the East Berlin German people's police to a year in jail as soldiers in an illegal army.

The defendants were Lieut. Heinz Erich Nocht, 21, and Patrolman Wilhelm Foloff, 22. They were arrested with six other East German policemen April 13 when they inadvertently entered the American sector while armed and in uniform.

They pleaded guilty to wearing the uniforms of a modified military organization, carrying military weapons and transporting war materials—all in violation of the Yalt and Potsdam agreements and four-power regulations demilitarizing Germany.

Their six companions are to be tried later.

U. S. District Judge John A. Sabo, of Gary, Ind., said he was bieng lenient because the men were "dupes of a designing and scheming authority." (Soviet Russia occupies East Germany, whose government is directed by Communists.)

The two men were sentenced to a year in jail on each of the three charges, but the sourt said the sentences on two of the charges would run concurrently and the other would be suspended.

The defendants testified the people's police was a full-scale war machine of 36,000 men with armor, infantry, naval units and an air force in training.

Cain Says He Favors Decontrol of Rents

Wakefield Hall

It's Tough Walking Up 8 Floors

The handsome Wakefield Hall apartment house at 2101 New Hampshire ave. nw. is a mighty uncomfortable place to live in these days.

Robert F. Cogswell, District rent control administrator, yesterday said about 28 tenants were living in the eight-story, 79-unit house without heat, gas, hot water and some without electricity.

Acting on complaints of the tenants, Cogswell yesterday got an order from Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court restraining the owners, Meyer Siegel and Doris C. Lowe, from reducing the minimum service standards under the District Rent Act.

According to Cogswell, the landlord has been granted court permission to repossess the apartments to perform extensive remodeling and alterations.

Some of the tenants, Cogswell said, asked for and received extensions running, in some cases, until June 5.

Herman Miller, attorney for the landlords, said the tenants had been notified when they asked for extensions that services would probably not be able to be maintained after May 1.

Occupancy of the apartments, Miller said, interferes with the remodeling which has already begun. The landlords propose to convert the 79 apartments into about 130 units.

Tenants, who asked to have their names withheld, said the elevator service and the switchboard had been discontinued. One family has to walk to the eighth floor.

One woman, the only occupant on the ground floor, asked for special police protection when the lights were turned off Monday. Some of the tenants said their electricity was restored after they promised to move in a few days.

One woman complained that remodelers in the next door apartment poked a large hole in the wall of her apartment.

Miller said he thought his clients would comply with the court order. Cogswell said he would ask for a preliminary injunction in District Court Monday.

Annual Banquet Meeting

The Rev. William Hunt of Montanden, Pa., will speak at the annual banquet meeting of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., at 6 p. m. today. Mr. Hunt baptized the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Church, and ordained the associate pastor, the Rev. Idris W. Jones.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) yesterday served notice he will oppose any extension of District rent controls.

The District rent control law now in force runs through June 30. It would take an act of Congress to continue it beyond that date. The District Commissioners and Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell have asked Congress to extend the District law one more year, but to take rent controls off furnished nonhousekeeping rooms as of June 30.

Cain, a former member of the Senate District Committee, took the floor to discuss published reports about efforts to form a cooperative program to purchase the Westchester Apartments, where he is a tenant.

He said he had talked with the management, and learned it had been approached by a number of responsible tenants, through their agent, to ask about buying their apartment units. Cain said the management informed him it told the agent if he represented 25 percent of the tenants it would seriously consider any definite proposal he might offer. Cain reported the agent is now trying to get that percentage of tenants.

Cain said he did not think the management would try to convert the facility to a co-operative until it knows what will be done about extending the District rent control act.

Cain said a question had been raised about how Senators living at the Westchester would vote on rent control for the District.

"Regardless of what happens to the Westchester, I shall vote at the first opportunity against extending rent controls in Washington, D. C.," Cain declared.

He said he believes in a competitive society, and believes, too, that "a decontrol of rents will be of substantial benefit to an overwhelming majority of the fine citizens who live in our Nation's Capital."

Lights to Turn Golden for Fete at Dupont Circle

There'll be dancing on the green at Dupont Circle under golden lights the night of May 16 to celebrate dedication of the new underpass.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved the following requests of the Connecticut Avenue Association, Inc., according to Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young:

(1) That the association be permitted to sponsor a folk dance exhibition on the circle the night of May 16, and (2) That the District paint in gold the globes of street lights around the Circle and along Connecticut ave. from N to S sts.

Horace J. Meyers, president of the association, said the celebration is being held "to commemorate 50 years of progress on Connecticut ave." as well as the long-awaited underpass opening.

The dancing exhibition will take place from 8:15 p. m. to 10 p. m., Meyers said, on a stand to be used for daytime dedication ceremonies.

J. N. Robertson, director of highways, said he expects the underpass will be opened to traffic the latter part of this week.

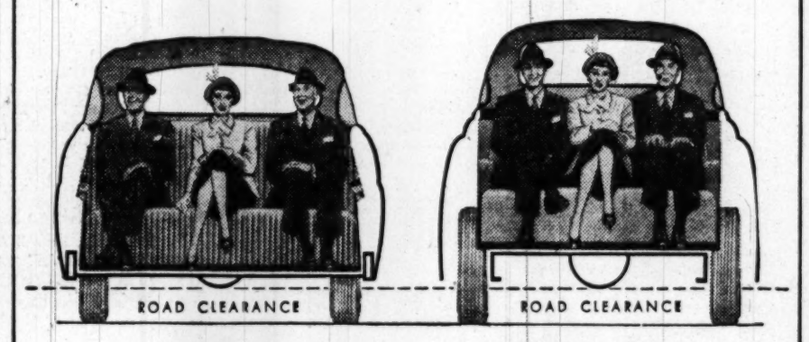
Why HUDSON'S recessed floor means Most Room! Best Ride! Safest!

Hudson's "step-down" design brings benefits in room, riding qualities and safety not obtainable in any other car at any price!



HUDSON

"Step-down" design, with its recessed floor, uses space between frame members that other cars waste. The result is America's lowest center of gravity (and full road clearance), while providing more head room and seating room than any other car.

OTHER CARS

All other cars have floor on top of frame, so they fail to utilize the vital space between frame members. Result is a higher center of gravity and either a high roof line or insufficient head room. Seats are narrower; passenger space is less.

WHEN you try Hudson's "New Step-Down Ride," we believe you will find it a delightfully new experience. For Hudson is the only motor car with a recessed floor ("step-down" design). This results in the lowest-built car of them all, with true streamlining and magnificent beauty.

It provides full road clearance and the most room in any automobile at any price! It creates America's lowest center of gravity, which brings you the best and safest ride ever known. Won't you accept your Hudson dealer's invitation —enjoy "The New Step-Down Ride" soon?

The new, lower-priced Pacemaker brings you all of Hudson's exclusive advantages for just a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars!

Commission Hikes Pay of Young, Mason

The District Board of Commissioners yesterday raised the salary of its two civilian members from $11,000 to $13,000 a year.

Those affected are John Russell Young and Guy Mason. They had been moved up two pay grades, to GS-17, last week by the Civil Service Commission's order assigning new grades to 400 top classified Government positions.

Victor A. Howard, secretary of the District Personnel Board, said GS-17 salaries range from $12,200 to $13,000, depending upon the length of service in grade. But presidential appointees, such as the commissioners, may go immediately to the top of their pay grade, he said.

The Commissioners yesterday also boosted salaries of the two civilian members of the Public Utilities Commission from $9707 to $11,000 a year. They are Chairman James H. Flanagan and Kenneth W. Spencer. This gives the PUC members, also presidential appointees, top pay in the GS-15 grade where they were assigned Monday by the Civil Service Commission.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, third member of both boards, is paid by the Army. His salary is $12,212, a Pentagon spokesman said.

Three Short D. C. Streets Rechristened

The Commissioners yesterday approved changes in the names of three short treetn in the District.

Lebaum st. se., between Mellon and Orange sts. becomes 5th st. se.

Franklin pl. ne., between Sheriff rd. and Lane pl., is changed to 44th st ne.

Emerson st. ne., through the square bounded by 13th, 14th, E and F sts., becomes Emerald st. ne.

Changes were recommended by Frank F. Healy, District surveyor, because the streets were confused with others in the city.

Dies of Burns; Hit 'Hot' Wire

HAROLD McDONALD, 10-year-old son of Mrs. Cleo McDonald, a widow, of 3732 Foote st. ne., died in Casualty Hospital at 4 a. m. yesterday, 10 hours after he had been felled by an 11,000-volt railroad electric line at Benning freight yards. The boy was playing with his brother, James, 9, and other boys under the Benning rd. viaduct. He climbed to the top of a freight car, then reached up and touched the overhead power line. The shock threw him to the ground. He suffered first, second and third degree burns. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death

Heitmuller, At 101, Is A Bit Tired

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

At the end of the first year of the second century of his life, Alfred Heitmuller is a little tired.

Alfred Heitmuller is weary even of trying to make the nature of the weariness of his mind understandable to younger minds.

Eventually, he drifts back, sometimes sadly, sometimes with a resigned smile to his old standby: "When you get as old as I am, you'll understand."

And so, yesterday, celebrating his 101st birthday at his home at 1325 Gallatin st. nw., with children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, neighbors, friends, reporters and photographers, Heitmuller said it would probably be the last time he'll grant interviews on his birthday.

Tired of It All

Heitmuller, "the wonder of Washington," the pride of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, the annual "must" interviewee, is a little tired of telling it over and over again.

About Lincoln riding to and from Soldiers' Home past the Heitmuller farm. About selling milk to Union soldiers and how a doctor told him he had only two years to live 77 years ago. About Washington fleshing out.

Worried About People

In a serious vein during what he said would be his last birthday interview, Heitmuller was worried about people.

"Since the Spanish-American war, you could almost see the change in people's faces. People used to be friendly.

"Why the first murder I remember around here was in 1865. People didn't get over that for years.

"Yes, people used to be friendly. Now you can't trust anyone on the other side of the door."

Heitmuller's two sisters lived into their nineties and all his five children are alive. His wife died about 24 years ago.

His home is with his daughter, Mrs. George O. Berger, and son, H. Anton Heitmuller. Alfred, jr., lives at 3803 17th st. ne. A daughter, Mrs. John A. Bresnahan, lives at 3602 Van Ness st. nw., and the other son, William makes his home at Cape Anne, Md. There are three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Arlington Boy Killed in Crash Of Auto, Truck

A 15-year-old Washington-Lee High School sophomore, Robert Thomas Adams of Arlington, was fatally injured yesterday when the car he was driving crashed into the back of a parked truck on Route 7 in Fairfax County, 1½ miles west of Falls Church.

He was the son of Lewis E. Adams, contractor, of 903 N. Larrimore st., Arlington.

Fairfax County police Pvt. Donald Hurst, said young Adams apparently lost control on a curve at 9:20 a. m. The car belonged to his father. The truck was being used by the Asplundh Tree Co.

The youth, who suffered a fractured jaw and head injuries, died in Arlington Hospital at about 11 a. m.

John P. Moss, 27, of Fairfax, who was standing on the tree-trimming crew's truck, was thrown to the highway by the impact. He was treated at Arlington Hospital for injuries to his right chest and released.

Young Adams, a native of Fairfax County, leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Adams, and a sister, Mrs. Alice Padgett of 2313 N. Edison st., Arlington.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 10 a.m. in the Fitzgerald funeral home, 3245 Wilson blvd., Arlington, with burial at National Memorial Park Cemetery.

Hill and a passenger, John O'Neil, 25, 6300 K st. ne., were taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, suffering from internal injuries, by the Silver Spring Rescue Squad. A technical charge of reckless driving was placed against the truck driver, Carl Blackstone, 28, of Elkridge Md., by Montgomery County police at Silver Spring, Md.

U. S. Official To Get Refund Of Car Excise

Assistant Secretary of State Jack K. McFall, in charge of congressional relations, won a decision from the one-man District Board of Tax Appeals yesterday on his $54.90 payment of the excise tax on an automobile.

McFall was required to pay the excise on a car he purchased in New York. He contended—and Tax Appeal Member Lawrence Koenigsberger agreed—that at the time of the purchase McFall was not a District resident. The tax was ordered refunded.

Koenigsberger said that McFall left the country on State Department matters in 1947 and, at that time, rented his home. When the State Department aide returned to the United States about a year later, he purchased the auto in New York and drove it to Washington.

When he registered the car here, Koenigsberger reported, he was forced to pay the excise tax to get his license plates. Koenigsberger commented that McFall's action in renting the house was proof of his position of non-residence.

Arlington Girl Wins

The Arlington high school senior was first in a field of eight contestants. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Lamoureaux of 5719 N. 25th rd., Arlington.

Tobacco Sales In Maryland Are Renewed

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Southern Maryland's tobacco auctions opened yesterday. Stocks offered for sale were among the biggest in history, and prices generally satisfactory.

In spite of continuous rain, the largest crowds that ever turned out to greet the opening of the selling season were on hand at the eight warehouses where the auctions were conductd.

Prices generally were below last year, with the average estimated at about 52 cents a pound, as compared with 54 cents 12 months ago. However, it was generally conceded the quality was equally low.

A considerable portion of tobacco from each market was going into storage under Government loan. The amount varied from 10 to 15 percent, with the largest number refusing the bid prices at La Plata. The Government will lend an average of 41.8 cents a pound. Any grower who is not satisfied with the offer made at the auction can turn his stocks over to the Maryland Tobacco Co-operative, which stores the tobacco under Government loan.

New Warehouse

The smallest crowd, and the smallest sales, were at Waysons Corner, where the first auction at a new tobacco warehouse was conducted.

Yesterday four buyers took part—enough to assure Government price supports. Only one, however, represented a major company, the R. J. Reynolds Company. Another buyer was rumored as buying for the Lorillard Tobacco Company, maker of Old Golds. The rumor stirred considerable interest, as Lorillard has not been represented in the Maryland markets for 25 years.

The Department of Agriculture and the Maryland Department of Markets issued the first of their daily joint reports, which will continue throughout the five months of the sales.

It found the practical top today was $67 per 100 pounds. A few top quality baskets brought $68, and some house purchases were made at $70.

The average during the morning sales, the Government report said, was estimated at between $52 and $50 a hundred. Last year on opening day sales averaged $52.63.

Low grade stocks brought better prices than the last year. According to the Government reports thin crop grades were $1 to $[illegible] a hundred pounds higher than on last year's opening. Second and tips showed substantial gains. Heavy crop grades declined.

Much Green

There seemed to be more heavy crop and tips for sale this year, a lower ratio of thin crop and seconds. There was a lot of green tobacco on the auction floors.

Already Dead

Pals Strive For 6 Hours To Save Man

Cambridge, Md., May 2 (AP).—A high-powered electric jolt killed "Hickory" Jones today, but all Cambridge refused for six hours to give him up for dead.

The crew lowered the 34-year-old power company lineman from a pole and started artificial respiration.

Dr. John Mace arrived and said Jones was dead.

But the linemen kept pumping. The word spread through Cambridge. "Hickory's" buddies in the Veterans of Foreign Wars spelled the linemen, pumping doggedly at the artificial respiration.

It started raining. No break in the pumping. Someone got a tent and it was set up over the knot of workers.

They organized crews and took turns—six men at a time.

Five hundred townsmen gathered. Cars clogged the road. In one of them sat Mary Lee Jones, "Hickory's" young wife, mother of a 2-year-old daughter.

"We won't give up for six hours," said Marty Sinshiemer.

"He'll come around. Lots have come around. Six hours, that's when a lot of them come around."

But he didn't. They finally gave it up.

Fred Jones—they call him "Hickory" because he's about 6-6—was one of the most popular men in town. Btu he didn't "come around."

Besides his wife and baby, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Jones, and several brothers and sisters.

Wild West Comes to P St.—But No Billy the Kid

The neighborhood of 15th and P sts. nw. had a little touch of the Wild West yesterday, but the shooting was hardly up to the standards of Billy the Kid.

There was a card game. An argument. And guns blazed. But their owners might as well have been shooting blanks.

This, according to Pvt. Albert Devine of the Thirteenth Precinct, is what happened:

Robert B. Gibson, 45, of 1460 Irving st. nw., and Rafaello Romano, 50, of 1459 P st. nw., were playing tank, a card game, in the garage at 1467 P st. nw., which Gibson operates. Romano works in the garage as a mechanic.

After a disagreement, Romano pulled a .32 caliber revolver and fired four shots. None hit Gibson.

Gibson then pulled a .38 caliber revolver out of his locker, turned and fired a shot at Romano. It missed.

The appearance of police then ended the gunplay.

Both were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and released in $1000 bond each for appearance today in Municipal Court.

Quick Work

Well, no one can say that Congress did not act quickly on daylight saving when it finally got around to it. The speed with which the time advance is to be put into effect Thursday is almost breathtaking. Washington has cause to be grateful to the Senate for moving so promptly to assent to the House bill passed Monday. It also has reason to thank Representative Arthur G. Klein for piloting his bill through the House over such unique objections as that of Representative Paul Jones, who contends that daylight saving advocates want "shorter hours for less work and more money." Although the law is again for one year only, it is just such inanities as put forth by Mr. Jones that may persuade legislators to end the annual time- and money-wasting debate—in short, to listen, not to the whims of Congressmen, but to the people of Washington.

Critical School Areas

Of all the pending proposals for Federal aid to bolster up the Nation's sagging public school system, perhaps the most urgent is that aimed at the relief of districts where Federal expansion has created a critical shortage of school facilities. There are more than 500 school districts affected in this way, and they have about a million and a half school children whose education is being impaired as a result. The problem grew out of the acquisition of large property holdings by the Federal Government and an influx of Federal workers. This meant simultaneously an increase in the school-age population and a decrease in the taxable sources of revenue.

The case for Federal aid in these acutely congested areas was stated succinctly by Agnes E. Meyer at a meeting here recently attended by delegates from 19 States. "We are trying to convince Congress," she said, "that the Federal Government must help to solve certain problems created by the activities of the Federal Government." In a real sense, the families who migrated to these areas at the Government's behest are our own displaced persons. They constitute a national problem neglect of which will result in national injury. The problem cannot be solved at the local level. It needs to be solved promptly by the Nation in the national interest no less than in the interest of the individuals and the localities involved.

The Pulitzer Prizes

It would be difficult, and certainly profitless, to quarrel with the Pulitzer prizes for last year's performances in journalism and the arts. In the fields of fiction, biography, history and so on the committee has, as usual, pretty much confirmed the popular verdicts. In journalism it has always shown a predilection for the "crusading" spirit, or for the kind of work that produces some demonstrable, objective result, and in this appears to be guided by the terms of the Pulitzer will. However, the committee does not ignore exceptional work in other categories of reporting, as is proved again by the award to Mr. Meyer Berger of the New York Times for his reporting of the senseless massacre of thirteen persons by an insane war veteran at Camden, N. J., or by the award to Mr. Edmund Stevens of the Christian Science Monitor for the informative series of articles on Soviet Russia dispatched by him from Berlin.

Naturally we are most gratified by the honor given to our fellow-townsman, Mr. James Berryman, political cartoonist of the Evening Star. We are especially pleased that Mr. Berryman did not have to wait quite as many years as did his father for this particular recognition. The elder Berryman had been a Washington institution since early in the century, but he did not receive a Pulitzer prize until about a half-dozen years before his death. One reason for this neglect, as we suggested on this page, may have been his old-fashioned draughtsmanship; another was doubtless his subtle, good-natured and somewhat undramatic way of puncturing pretensions and foibles.

Obviously, the technique of Mr. Berryman, fils, has been strongly influenced by his father's. At the time when both were appearing on the Star's editorial page it was often difficult to distinguish them. At other times it has seemed to us that the satiric thrust of the younger Berryman was slightly but perceptibly more acidulous; but if so it merely reflects the spirit of an age that tends to put a higher value upon satire than whimsicality.

Dollars And Arms

The major tools of a foreign policy which seeks to dovetail strategy and statesmanship in the right proportions needed for the successful conduct of the cold war are simple to define. They are leadership and brains. This priority we have not yet acknowledged. The priorities have so far been given to dollars and arms, and on balance both have done as much harm as good.

When, for instance, we shoveled dollars into the Philippines, in lieu of the materials we could not wholly deliver as promised for the repair of war damage, we insured the fiscal spree at Manila which has put our former ward on its back, and by the same token given a great boost to the Communist-led Huks. Our dollars are fastening on the Asiatics the worst of all curses, i. e., inflation. Inflation helps to enthrone the moneylender and the speculator in keeping the Asiatic enslaved. As for arms, these we put into the hands of the tatterdemalion troops of Chiang Kai-shek, and we thus helped to insure Chiang Kai-shek's collapse, because those arms were regarded merely as counters in a game of panicky and fear-struck surrender. Thus we ended up by, in effect, arming Communist China. No better work has been done by Congress than to deny an arms-crazy Administration the authority to send our lethal weapons anywhere it wished.

In Europe, where there is more sense of responsibility than in Asia, dollars so far have done more good than harm. So have the arms—in priming national self-respect and domestic and the general security. But the usefulness of both is beginning to intoxicate the policy-makers and arouse the Oliver Twist instincts of the recipients to such an extent that huge levies are looming ahead on our exchequer and our arsenal. The tendency is to say if x dollars and x arms have been useful, then xx dollars and xx arms will be even more useful. That doesn't necessarily follow. Think of the small number of Germans that were required to overrun the Maginot Line and the French army. It is time to think less in terms of dollars and arms and more in terms of policy and the nonmilitary needs of the Atlantic community. The serried might of Russia should not be our preoccupation. Our preoccupation should be the listlessness in Europe. In Europe the questioner is reminded that the United States is in danger of building up the military machines and the self-sufficient state systems that on two occasions have been Europe's undoing.

Humpty Dumpty simply cannot be put back again. The fact is that neither the East nor the West can be returned to the old world system. In the East the age of imperialism is dead, and American support for any re-establishment of the old colonial system—as in Indo-China for the French—is foredoomed to failure. As for Europe, the peoples are community-minded and nonmilitarist, and their contribution to defense will be nil if they are called upon merely to save their antiquated national state systems. If, therefore, policy-making must start with the realities, here they are, and we ought to be taking a new look at the requirements of realizing such concepts as will fulfill the people's aspirations. People only defend wholeheartedly what they believe in.

Ferrero, the great Italian historian, concluded a study of foreign policy in the last century with this observation:

> One of the gravest mistakes committed by human indolence is the belief that order is best preserved by keeping it as it stands. It can only be preserved by continually reconstructing it. The only real guardians are those who reconstruct it. . . . Nothing is so rare as a great constructive mind.

Nothing is so rare as a great constructive mind! The truth of Ferrero's observation is borne out by postwar history. Our recital is the proof. If in war the first principle is to impose your will on the enemy, the first principle of peace is to discover a unifying idea, and pursue it.

A unifying idea in the world of today would be a comprehensive emigration-immigration policy of relieving Europe's population pressure and of resettling surpluses in such open spaces, as, say, Australia, Oceania, and Brazil. Here is something new, something that could capture men's imagination, something that would unify, something in which a host of nations East and West have a common interest, something that would create a diversion from the present descent into war. All there needs to be is a favorable climate for brains and the assertion of the statesmanship requisite for their mobilization. Any fool can throw dollars and arms around.

"Barbarian Invasion"

Dr. Owen Lattimore appeared before the Tydings Subcommittee yesterday not simply as the defender of his own good name but as the champion of free inquiry. He pleaded for a right that is the root of American freedom—"the right of American scholars and authors to think, talk and write, freely and honestly, without the paralyzing fear of the kind of attack to which I have been subjected." He characterized the attack in the apt words of Prof. Zechariah Chafee, jr., of Harvard, as a "barbarian invasion."

There does not remain a scintilla of unrefuted evidence—in the testimony either of Senator McCarthy or of Louis Budenz or of Freda Utley or even of the informer Huber who did not dare to appear before the subcommittee—that Dr. Lattimore was guilty of anything more than an expression of views with which these "witnesses" disagreed. He has an inalienable right to the expression of such views; and the preservation of this right is of the utmost importance to the society of which he is a member. It is a right that can be destroyed not only by repressive legislation of a kind which the Constitution forbids Congress to enact but equally by the kind of vilification and intimidation to which Senator McCarthy resorted under the immunity from legal action conferred on him by Congress.

Dr. Lattimore's assailants, striking like footpads from behind, did not attempt to attack his ideas; they attacked his character and impugned his motives—always where they could not be called to account. These "brazenly illiterate" men, as Dr. Lattimore called them, recklessly exploiting popular anxiety, recall to mind the ugly "Know Nothing" movement that flourished transiently in the 1850s. Arrayed against them in support of Dr. Lattimore is virtually the entire body of informed and scholarly students of Far Eastern problems.

The Senate of the United States, unintentionally, has allowed itself to be used as the instrument for a mean and dangerous kind of political attack. It is under a solemn obligation in the circumstances to do something more than vindicate Owen Lattimore as an individual. It is under obligation to reassert the right of scholarly inquiry and expression. It is under obligation, as Dr. Lattimore asserted, to point out that > the processes of the Senate of the United States have been debased by this man McCarthy; that he has been contemptuous of this committee; that he has lied, distorted and vilified; that he has improperly received and used classified information; that he has made promises which he has not fulfilled; that he has used discreditable and disreputable sources of false information; that he has disgraced his party and the people of his State and Nation; and that he has grievously prejudiced the interests of our country.

We think that the Senate of the United States should make it plain that it will never again lend itself to such a "barbarian invasion" of civilized values and institutions.

Pakistan's Premier

Welcome today to the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Liaquat Ali Khan, and Begum Liaquat Ali Khan. Liaquat Ali has just come from Karachi, lately in the headlines not only as Pakistan's capital, but also as an Indo-Pakistan peace center. Till a month ago, the two countries, which split away when the subcontinent became independent of British rule, appeared to be headed for war. Nothing, seemingly, could stave it off. Not only was there a stoppage of all trade except for smuggling across the frontiers; communal (or Hindu-Muslim) riots were daily occurrences, causing much bloodshed and refining still further the razor-edged relations of the two countries. Suddenly the drift was arrested. The two Prime Ministers, India's Nehru and Pakistan's Liaquat Ali, met at Delhi, amid great personal danger to themselves, and signed an accord and set up the machinery for the protection of minorities—the 12 million Hindus in Pakistan and the 40 million Moslems in India.

This cloud-lifting was one of the really great acts of postwar statesmanship. If a statesman is a man who is a channeler instead of just an instrument of history, then Liaquat Ali deserves the accolade. He was not content with this achievement, either. Believing in the maxim that you must strike while the iron is hot, he promised to make the meeting a sort of continuous conference, so as to try to settle all the outstanding differences which have arisen over partition. In anticipation a beginning has been made in re-establishing trade. He is taking time out from peacemaking to come to Washington, and he will find a congratulatory reception, for the rift between two countries, which must live in neighborly relations or perish, has been followed here with an anxiety borne of the knowledge of the world conflagration that an Indo-Pakistan clash would ignite.

Liaquat Ali Khan came to fame as the lieutenant and friend of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, founder of Pakistan. He stood in the same relation to Jinnah as Nehru stood in relation to Gandhi. "His outstanding characteristic as Prime Minister," says Mr. Richard Symonds in The Making of Pakistan, "has been the serenity with which he has confronted both political crises and mass demonstrations. A weaker or more emotional man might not have been able to avoid war with India." His country is so young that it is still without a constitution, but the foundation of nationhood is there, the people having been seized with the spirit and energy necessary to make independence a dynamic reality. These qualities are crowned with the kind of leadership represented by Liaquat Ali Khan.

Leadership in a new country is the priceless ingredient of success. Liaquat Ali Khan deserves our admiration for what he has done for "the land of the Paks" in uniting a will-to-progress with their spiritual heritage. We hope he has an enjoyable stay in our midst.

THIS FAREWELL

Having said goodbye, terror comes out somewhere
To harness breath and press the throat down hard.
And this becomes a terrible thick air
As doors between are swiftly shut and barred.

Now all is surely lost. You understand
The ice strung in the blood, the moving away
Of the loved form and mind, and the warm hand:
One suddenly shoved upon an empty day.

The faltering words to speak when you depart
Are unavailing. Nothing will atone
For the unmeasured ill which the choked heart
Receives in silence and endures alone.

Crop Support Losses

When ever-normal profits on crops produced are, in effect, guaranteed by the Government, the natural tendency is for each individual to produce more and more. When we can prevent each person from trying to look out for himself (and I hope we do not try), then, perhaps, we shall be able to carry on these operations without the necessity of constantly increasing Government appropriations.

If it is not impossible to control this situation under the present setup, it is at least impracticable without almost endless Government interference.

There is one way this situation could be controlled: Institute an arrangement under which each producer would be allowed to sell, at Federally supported prices, no more than he sold under such support during the previous season. In practice, to allow for Government losses, not more than two thirds as much would be safer. Do not restrict our farmers as to what or how much they shall raise; if anyone wants to open up a new farm or produce more do not interfere with him, but let him sell this increase at prices determined by public demand.

In the Brannan plan, it is difficult to see any improvement over the present setup; it might, in fact, readily make the situation worse.

"Acheson Hits Back"

So you regard as "righteous indignation" the angry bellowing of Secretary Acheson when Senator McCarthy turns up another Communist in his State Department!

Undoubtedly the State Department is made up mostly of loyal people, but the fact remains that hidden Communists enjoying State Department confidence have been uncovered, and so it is possible there are some more. Acheson closes his eyes to these facts and possibilities in his furious reply to McCarthy, the ugliness of which stamps it as anything but "intellectual."

It seems to me any undesirable effects of McCarthy's "wrong way" have been greatly exaggerated, whereas the real cause for worry is the Communists who slip through the "right way" system of loyalty boards and FBI.

For turning up a hidden Communist in a position where he could do and probably has done great damage, and for revealing the danger of relying too much on the loyalty investigation system as it now exists, Senator McCarthy deserves the country's thanks.

The formidable weight of The Washington Post's backing of Acheson is considerably lightened when you even applaud his hope that he will not have to mention this "filthy mess" again—a hope strangely reminiscent of his long, futile and insipid defense of his refusal to turn his back on Alger Hiss!

Food for China

Famine confronts millions of Chinese men, women, and children today. We, on the other hand, have enormous stockpiles of excess food both in this country and apparently in Japan.

Whatever else may be said about the "people's government" in China today, its leaders have demonstrated over and over again their genuine concern for the livelihood of the people. Food turned over to them for the relief of the starving would be used for that purpose. One who has seen some of the evidences of foreign domination in China can understand the reason why the leaders reject the idea of supervision of distribution of food or other materials for the relief of suffering.

I believe that the vast majority of the American people, given an opportunity to express their wishes, would want us to carry on the fine tradition of help to those in all parts of the world who have been the victims of famine, flood, fire and earthquake.

Can't we urge our policy-makers to take this step at once without reservation or restriction? It is one consonant with our national spirit and cannot fail to be of considerable significance in our relationship to the rest of the world.

Ambassador To Guatemala

Long before the sudden departure of Ambassador Patterson, brought about by his interference in the domestic affairs of Guatemala, where he has been serving for more than two years, I had predicted his failure.

When the question was brought to my attention regarding the ability of Ambassador Patterson to solve the much-talked-about difficulties of American capital in Guatemala, I suggested to a very close friend of President Truman, at that time vacationing in Guatemala, that Ambassador Patterson should be recalled in the best interests of both the United States and Guatemala.

My reasons at that time were, and still are, that Mr. Patterson approached the delicate problem of handling the situation created after the 1944 revolution, with the ousting of former dictator Ubico and the election of President Juan Jose Arevalo, in a manner of complete antagonism to the new labor trends supported by the new government, trends that demanded an increase in wages and better working conditions.

Such antagonism, carried to the extent of an open fight in favor of American capital, has been so far his sole aim and work since he has been in office.

It is a known fact that Guatemala for many generations has been the prey of the United Fruit Co. banana empire, and that this company for many years has been able to dictate its terms regarding the contracts on which the bananas have been farmed in Guatemala and exported to the United States. But never in the history of Guatemala was there one Ambassador that made his efforts so blunt, his aim so clear, as to antagonize the Guatemalan government on all fronts, as did Mr. Patterson in his ill-remembered ambassadorship, in order to protect the interests of the United Fruit Co.

It seems to me that when a diplomatic officer is sent down to these countries to represent the United States, the purpose of his work should be to cooperate in the betterment of reciprocal relations more than to increase the number of dollars and cents for the United States. In the case of Mr. Patterson, we have never seen, heard, or known of anything constructive that he may have done to further the good neighbor policy. How could Mr. Patterson achieve results by giving a hand to this country where he was serving, if he didn't even speak the Spanish language?

But not only was the United Fruit Co. his pet protege. The oil companies, the chicle companies, all of them found in Mr. Patterson their best man: zealous and always ready to go all out in the defense of their interests, disregarding fairness and with no consideration to the interests of the Guatemalans.

The time has come in which the policy of the State Department for Latin America has to be revised to conform to new standards of respect among nations. Only through the real understanding of the needs of all the small Latin-American countries can a sound policy of successful cooperation be brought about in the future, and with the complete ostracism of the Pattersons of the old Big-Stick American diplomats.

Atrocities In Communist China

Grace D. Liu makes two points in her May 1 letter from Tientsin that deserve factual challenge: (1) an inference that reports of Chinese Red cruelties to missionaries are mostly vodka-inspired; (2) her testimony that life in Tientsin is better than it has been since 1937.

A United Press story from Hongkong in the same issue of The Washington Post declares that thousands of Chinese have starved to death in eastern Hopei Province, where an estimated 80 percent of the people are suffering from lack of food. Miss Liu lives in Tientsin, which is in eastern Hopei Province, so there you have two conflicting reports.

I spoke of this to a man who came out of China only a month ago. He said the United Press account was unquestionably more accurate, and went on to say: "From the reports of the ordinary people—and I don't mean the wealthy ones—drifting out of China and into Hongkong today, it would seem that almost 80 percent of the Chinese, due to starvation, unemployment and excessive taxation, are now turning against the Communists whom they welcomed a short time ago."

In regard to the treatment of missionaries in Red China, the News Service of the National Catholic Welfare Conference has a list of 87 Catholic priests, brothers and nuns who were killed by the Chinese Reds from VJ-Day to the summer of 1948. This list, compiled from Church documents, gives individual names, dates of death, places of death, and means of death. These are not "blood-curdling, hair-raising" atrocity stories, but a calm recital of facts.

It should be noted that this list extends only to the summer of 1948. Catholic Church leaders have been candid to say that since that time the pattern of Red opposition to Christianity has changed from a violent one to a perhaps even more effective system of curtailment of religious freedom, use of church buildings for communistic purposes, government interference in school curricula, restriction on missionary travel, and continual harassment of individuals who openly profess Christianity.

The bloody atrocities are mostly past, but the atrocities against the conscience continue. Catholic missionaries have a far different picture to present than that of Miss Liu when she says: "I know that my life is freer, more interesting and enjoyable than it's ever been in China."

Edgy Nerves, Mass Anxiety

By Malvina Lindsay

Big Bad Wolf Pus-s

THE AVERAGE man says, "What's eating people anyway?" Parlor psychologists probe endlessly in conversation for "what's really back of all this emotionalism."

Nearly everyone is conscious of an underlying human tension, a suppressed hostility likely to flare, not only in the McCarthy case obsession, but in almost any dispute—over politics, foreign affairs, modern art, religion, in-laws.

Man's age-old enemy, fear, is generally regarded as the basis of this behavior. But what kind of fear? Not physical fear. Americans are not cowards. Besides, most of them probably believe that "something" will happen to ward off H-bombs, or at least that they will strike the other fellow. Is this then fear of communism? Of socialism? Of unemployment? Of change? Or just fear of the unknown?

In the Institute of Psychology of Peoples and Nations at The Hague, a start is being made in finding out why national groups behave as they do. Dr. F. W Zeylmans van Emmichoven, who in collaboration with a group of psychologists and sociologists founded the institute, believes that "every nation and people is a spiritual entity with its own distinctive inner character, its own psychological make-up." Until nations are so understood by themselves and by those dealing with them, international harmony is impossible.

NOW IN this country on his second visit, Dr. Zeylmans has traveled from coast to coast meeting many Americans in all walks of life. Out of his own observations and the studies of the institute, he sees the United States as a definite personality, which like all nations—and all individuals as well—is a "medal with two sides."

Fear in this country has its special pattern, yet it is part of a general fear neurosis which Dr. Zeylmans sees sweeping the world. Throughout history there have been world waves of fear that rose and fell. But until distance was eliminated they could be localized. Now the fears of a man in Indo-China may cause anxiety in a man in Omaha.

In its response to world fear this Nation finds itself torn two ways. Its "good side of the medal," as Dr. Zeylmans sees it, is its "strong feeling for the totality of mankind." Its age as a Nation has something to do with this. It was coming to flower just as the geographical concept of a single world was developing.

Every nation, Dr. Zeylmans believes, has a feeling of wanting a task, a destiny. People of the United States, by origin, tradition, temperament, especially feel a sense of responsibility to others. The European may be more aware of what goes on in the world, but he is more likely to shrug his shoulders at evil or chaos. The American feels something should be done about them.

BUT—THE task seems insuperable. Hence the isolationist urge to run away from it. Hence some of the emotionalism in argument justifying retreat or response.

Americans also have a legacy of emotionalism out of their background. Widely different racial and psychological elements make up their heritage. Idealists, adventures and rebels against all sorts of conformity, including law, settled the country. Hence the bad side of the medal shows in a tendency to lawlessness and crime, in an impulsive response to anxiety and uncertainty.

The prowling wolf of fear can be more easily held at bay by those who understand their own vulnerable points of attack. But fear also has a basis common to all peoples of the world, Dr. Zeylmans believes. Modern man lacks an inner center of strength. He may feel that the institutions, dogmas, philosophies, on which he has depended are inadequate to his present problems. Or he may have become entirely dependent on material buttresses. He may be confused and rudderless by social change. His greatest present need is a deeper sense of spiritual concepts, or a new understanding of them.

As a more immediate step in lessening world discord, Dr. Zeylmans advocates an international council or board of distinguished world figures in the field of social science. This would "develop truth in an unselfish way" about all peoples and nations and give advice or information on request to governments, organizations, also to people generally as a basis for forming opinions. Members of the board would serve without salary — and above all they would have no political ambition.

Daylight Time Benefits

H. G. of Alexandria says in her letter of April 26, "Let's have a more thoughtful and adult discussion" of daylight saving after categorically stating "I have yet to see any really worthwhile reason put forward for its adoption."

The primary reasons are: (1) More sunshine can be enjoyed by persons "cooped up during the winter; (2) gardeners can work their plots better in late afternoons than in the morning, wet with dew; (3) opportunity is presented for moving around in daylight instead of after dark; (4) sleep some earlier on short summer nights; (5) greater safety, less tiredness, more energy, better health are the net results of daylight saving.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Job Has Only Begun

ROME.—According to the official timetable, we are at the midway point in the reconstruction of Europe, which is to be completed by 1952. Unfortunately, every fact of the European situation already suggests that the official timetable is worthless.

The rebuilding of the war-shattered political and economic life of the Western world is going to require an American attack on a much broader front and with a far more elastic time limit.

The temptation, of course, is to say, "To hell with it, let the Europeans stew in their own juice." But here we run into the grim blackmail of the cold war. If we duck our responsibility, western Europe will rather soon become a new province of the Soviet empire. And we in the United States will experience the equivalent of a gigantic military defeat, probably without a shot having been fired.

In no sense does this mean that the American investment in Europe to date has been wasted. Here in Rome, for instance, only 2½ years ago, a great crisis of misery impended. The economy was at a standstill. If America had not acted, the Communists would surely have come to power.

That time now seems incredibly distant. The Italian recovery, made possible by Marshall aid, has, as it were, gilded this superbly beautiful city with a splendid glitter of prosperity. The life of the poor is still infinitely hard. There are still two million jobless in Italy. But in Italy the gap between privileged and underprivileged has been cruelly wide. The profusion of luxury that everywhere meets the eye in Rome in the Holy Year means that a semblance of normal economic life has now returned here.

IN THE political sphere, the same rule holds good. The government of Prime Minister Alcide de Gasperi is at least a stable, non-Communist government, comprising many able men. By the stern police measures of the bullet-headed little Minister of the Interior, Mario Scelba, the authority of the Italian state has at least been restored.

These achievements, which seemed almost unimaginable 2½ years ago, are certainly not to be scorned. But the smiling surface of Italy in 1950 must nonetheless not be taken at face value. Too many things that ought to have happened have not happened.

Nothing has been done, to begin with, about the basic social and economic problems that confront Italy. Land reform is at last being discussed by the government, but only very tepidly, and as a result of direct Communist pressure. As for Italian overpopulation, widespread joblessness in the midst of prosperity, and the appalling disparity between rich and poor, these topics are not even being talked about.

In part, to be sure, this is because the Marshall Plan administration has tended to emphasize increasing Italian national production at the expense of everything else. But the real cause of this curious political-economic sterility in Italy is another gap in the national recovery. A normal political life has not yet been restored.

The De Gasperi government in effect enjoys a monopoly on power because the Communists are the only alternative. Prime Minister de Gasperi himself and the wiser men around him sincerely desire to tackle Italy's great problems. But a monopoly situation leads to complacency. And thus the elements in the De Gasperi coalition having a vested interest in the status quo always succeed in blocking bold action. Thus the government grows more and more sterile, and tends to rely more and more on simple police measures to maintain itself in the face of the discontent of the masses.

THE STERILE centrist government, staying in power because most people do not want the Communists, because the police are efficient, and because of Marshall aid, is a European phenomenon, to be found in other countries besides Italy. But such governments cannot endure forever. Even if Marshall aid is not abruptly terminated in 1952, the Communists must win eventually, unless the present political monopoly can be broken. The creation of a healthy, vigorous, independent left wing is the basic necessity of the restoration of normal political life in Europe.

Finally, the situation is rendered all the more dangerous by another thing that has not happened. Neither Italy, nor western Europe as a whole has recovered as yet from the neurosis left behind by two great world wars. The symptoms have been muted by the progress of the last two years. But the neurosis remains and still makes the western Europeans feel that they are not masters of their own fate—that they are hardly responsible, indeed, for whatever the future may bring to them.

There is no reason to despair. The western European neurosis can be cured almost overnight, for example, if the western Europeans can be given a sense of security from aggression. All else will then follow. But it is now urgent to grasp how inherent the weakness of the situation in Europe is, because this is why western Europe is so vulnerable to the tactics of terror the Kremlin is now adopting. If the right countermeasures are not quickly taken in Washington, the Kremlin has only to "huff and to puff and to blow the house down."

Wisconsin's Name

By Marquis Childs

La Follette And McCarthy

THERE IS one man here in Washington who has watched the developments of McCarthyism with a special interest. That is Robert M. La Follette, jr., who was defeated by Senator McCarthy in the Republican primary just four years ago.

Childs

Completing his third full term in the Senate, La Follette was in the midst of a strenuous and exacting effort to put across the Congressional Reorganization Act. Teamed up with Representative Mike Monroney in the House, the Senator from Wisconsin was concentrating all his energies on achieving a step forward in Government efficiency.

Friends had warned him that he was in trouble in Wisconsin. McCarthy, using his judgeship as a convenient means of getting around the State, had been campaigning strenuously for many months.

But also there was thunder on the left. For a year or more the Communists and their fellow travelers in Wisconsin had been attacking and smearing La Follette. They were in control at that point of certain unions in Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities.

Their hatred of La Follette had at least two strong motivations. For one thing he had dared to question the sincerity and the intentions of the Soviet Union in its relations with the United States and the West. That, remember, was when the influence of the wartime alliance was still strong and official policy was to do everything to "get along" with Russia in peacetime.

BUT A deeper reason was even more compelling. La Follette stood for what communism hates and fears most—a progressive and reasonable solution for social and economic ills. This has been illustrated over and over again both in Europe and America. It is the social-democrats and the progressives on whom the Communists direct their most virulent attack.

From the beginning of the career of the younger La Follette's father, "Fighting Bob," the La Follettes had worked for progressive change. They had made Wisconsin a laboratory for pioneer experiments in the kind of social legislation today generally accepted.

But this course had won the La Follettes the enmity of the extreme right, too. So four years ago you had a fascinating example of the two extremes both working to destroy a valuable public servant.

There have been published reports that the Democratic high command joined in this effort. The report, denied by Democratic headquarters, is that in the primary race $10,000 was secretly sent in by the Democrats to help McCarthy. This, if it was in fact done, was in the conviction that McCarthy would be a much easier target in the November election for defeat by the Democrats.

THE DEMOCRATIC candidate was Prof. Howard J. McMurray who had served one term in Congress. McMurray at that point was saying the things about foreign policy which pleased the Communists and their satellites.

IN THE closing days of the campaign, La Follette came back to Wisconsin to try to recover lost ground. It was too late. He was defeated in the primary by about 5900 votes.

That narrow margin may well have been supplied by the Communists who went into Wisconsin's open primary to do a hatchet job. It was generally felt that without the efforts of the extreme left over a long period La Follette would not have been defeated.

While he has made no public statement, La Follette has watched the McCarthy spectacle with a growing feeling of the harm done to the Nation and particularly to Wisconsin. After the defeat of four years ago he had felt that he was probably through with politics. He has been retained by several large corporations as a consultant in Washington and he is on the board of directors of the United Fruit Co.

But today La Follette is thinking about the possibility of running against McCarthy in 1952. He has reached no decision. The odds are perhaps against his return to active politics with all the sacrifices that this inevitably would mean.

Yet one can understand his feelings. The State so closely allied to the La Follette name is now attached to a campaign of reckless charges that have done great harm both at home and abroad.

As for the Communists, they must surely feel satisfied with what they achieved in Wisconsin in 1946. Their goal is to weaken and undermine America's position abroad and the will and resolution of Americans at home to carry through a determined foreign policy capable of resisting Communist aggression. They got more than their money's worth four years ago.

All 11 Indiana Congressmen Apparently Win in Primary

Indianapolis, May 3 (Wednesday) (AP).—All of Indiana's 11 Congress members apparently won renomination in Tuesday's primary.

The election was marked by delays and confusion in the cities, where voting was heavy.

Long lines of citizens, held up by slow voters, still stood outside the polls at the official closing times.

In most cases the officials ignored the closing time and permitted all in line to vote, some of them more than an hour late.

The heavy vote in the populous areas, plus long lists of candidates seeking nomination for county officers, slowed up the election machinery.

Voting in the rural areas generally was light.

Mrs. Cecil Harden of Covington, the State's only Congresswoman, was the only one of the delegation to get serious pre-primary opposition.

The attractive 55-year-old grandmother started out with a commanding lead from the first count and was piling up a lead of around three to one over her strongest opponent.

Representative Ralph Harvey, a Republican from Mount Summit, ran the strongest of all the candidates seeking re-election. His advantage was more than 10 to 1 over two opponents.

Representative Charles Halleck of Rensselaer, Republican assistant minority leader, held a 4-to-1 lead over his opponent.

Pension Payments to Miners Resumed, Controls Tightened

Pensions of $100 a month for retired miners, suspended last September when the United Mine Workers welfare fund ran out of money, yesterday were ordered resumed, but under a stricter eligibility basis.

The trustees of the fund, headed by UMW President John L. Lewis, met here and announced pension checks would start going out again beginning next month to miners 60 years of age and over, who have worked 20 years in the coal industry, provided they worked for a full year immediately before their retirement. The last provision tightens the eligibility requirements.

Death benefits of $1000 were put back in effect yesterday, but limited to beneficiaries "who were actually dependent" on the deceased miner. When a miner leaves no dependents, the fund will give his local $350 for funeral expenses.

The trustees announced that "contrary to unfounded published reports," no consideration was given to increasing the payments of pensions of $125 a month. The fund plans to take action later on resumption of disability, medical and hospital payments, also suspended since last year.

The miners' welfare fund is supported by 30-cents-a-ton royalties paid by the coal mine operators.

Labor Dept. Cuts UP Teletype

The Labor Department yesterday shut off its United Press teletype in order not to cross a picket line.

The action was taken, an official explained, because the AFL Commercial Telegraphers' Union is on strike against the United Press newspaper service in a dispute over wages.

The 265 wire men, who get $90 a week, walked out of UP bureaus over the country, in an effort to win a $6.50-a-week raise in pay. UP's last offer was $2.21.

Locally, 21 striking telegraphers have been picketing the National Press Building, where the UP bureau is situated, on a 24-hour basis.

UP's headquarters in New York reported that its service has been running close to normal under operation by supervisory personnel.

At Pittsburgh, the Press ran into publication difficulties when some members of other AFL unions refused to cross the telegraphers' picket lines.

Storm Drain Assessments Are Protested

The Prince Georges County Commissioners will confer with the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to seek relief for a group of Riverdale Heights citizens from heavy benefit assessments for a storm-drainage project.

This was decided by the commissioners after 30 Riverdale Heights citizens protested against "exorbitant" assessments at yesterday's meeting in Marlboro.

The group, led by Frank Anderson, vice president of the Riverdale Heights Citizens Association, and Chris Sondberg, roads committee chairman, contended the citizens were led to believe the assessments would be much lower than they turned out to be.

The work, done on petition by the property owners, was completed in the spring of 1949. The project covered parts of eight streets in the Riverdale Heights Special Improvement District.

Sondberg told the commissioners the citizens agreed to project after they were informed that the front-foot assessment for 59th ave., first to be improved, amounted to about $15. Tentative figures for the whole project, prepared by county officials, vary by streets from $12 to $24 a front foot.

The WSSC, Anderson said, told the citizens it could not assume any of of the costs of the drainage work. He pointed out that many of the home owners are unable to afford the assessments, amount in some instances to $3000, and purchase their homes at the same time.

Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh, who suggested the conference with WSSC officials, reminded the citizens that they had chosen concrete surfaces for the streets which, he said, is the most costly type.

Dave Moore of New Lexington, in first returns. They are seeking the Republican nomination.

With five of 269 polling places reported, Brehm had 134 and Moore 49.

Moore, however, was expected to give Brehm the hardest tussle any incumbent would meet in the primary.

All other incumbents, both Republicans and Democrats, either were unopposed, or were having an easy time of it with the reports of the first polling places to complete their counts.

Republican Cliff Clevenger of Bryan, the Fifth District incumbent, jumped to a two-to-one edge over his nearest opponent; Democrat John McSweeney of Wooster, the 16th District incumbent, held a 256-24 margin over Edison W.

Candidates Must Take Md. Loyalty Oath

Baltimore, May 2 (AP).—Attorney General Hall Hammond ruled today that no candidate can get on the ballot in next fall's Maryland elections unless he signs the special oath that he is not a subversive and does not belong to any subversive organizations.

The director of the Progressive Party of Maryland announced its candidates would not take such a pledge.

The two declarations indicated a new court test for Maryland's stringent law against subversives.

Fairfax Soon Will Have 3 Coroners

Fairfax County will soon have three coroners instead of one because of its "abnormally high" traffic fatality rate, Dr. Geoffrey, Mann, chief Virginia medical examiner, said yesterday.

He named Dr. Emanuel Newman, the present deputy medical ing coroner yesterday, pending the appointment of the three new medical examiners.

Dr. Newman is temporarily replacing Dr. Nelson Prodolnick, who resigned because of pressure of private business.

Mann said the coroners will be assigned geographically to facilitate their work.

Postoffice 'Palaces' Held Unnecessary

The American Newspaper Publishers Association told Congress yesterday that the Postoffice Department should stop building "marble palaces" if it wants to save money.

Frank A. Daniels, spokesman for the association, said the Postoffice should economize—not raise rates—to get out of debt. He said too much money is spent building fancy postoffices in the best real estate sections. He added the Postoffice is "loaded" with other high costs that could be cut.

Daniels testified before the Senate Postoffice Committee on a House-approved bill to increase postal rates. Daniels and other newspaper representatives opposed increases in the second-class mailing charges on newspapers.

Annual Kerr Award Given Dr. Weaver

The medical staff of Garfield Hospital last night honored its resident and interne doctors, and awarded one of them a $50 prize.

Recipient of the hospital's first annual Dr. H. H. Kerr Award was Dr. Ralph M. Weaver, resident pathologist, now completing his third year of specialized training. He received the citation and $50 cash prize.

Honorable mention citations in the judging of best medical papers prepared by the hospital's resident doctors was given to Drs. Winfield Worth, resident in surgery, and Ralph D. Whitley, chief resident physician.

The awards were announced and presented at a special dinner at Hotel Kennedy-Warren by Dr. Harry Hyland Kerr, hospital consultant in surgery, in whose honor they were named.

U. N. Pact Asked To Outlaw Quick Foreign Divorces

Lake Success, May 2 (NYHT).—The International Law Association asked the United Nations today to approve a world treaty to outlaw quick foreign divorces granted by some countries out of a "kind of local commercial divorce mill . . . subsidiary to the country's tourist business."

James W. Ryan, representing the association, put the proposition before the U. N. Social Commission. He told the delegates the problem of easy foreign divorce had recently been spotlighted "by well-known people."

The Social Commission chairman, Dr. Jose A. Correa of Ecuador, said after the hearing he would nominate the subject of a divorce treaty for a place on the agenda of the next session.

Tabulation of 516 polling places gave Lausche 11,494 votes, Knisley 2684 and Torok 740.

Bender Opponents Snowed Under

George H. Bender, a Cleveland in surance man, was snowing under two opponents in the Republican race for the Congressman-at-large nomination.

Bender has served five two-year terms in the office. If nominated, he will run against the Democratic incumbent, Stephen M. Young of Cleveland, who knocked off Bender in 1948.

Young, 1 of the 12 Democrats now representing Ohio in Congress, won renomination without opposition. Republicans hold 11 of Ohio's 23 congressional seats.

All the Ohio Congressmen are seeking reelection. Only six had primary opposition.

Thomas A. Jenkins of Ironton, dean of Ohio Republicans in Congress, appeared headed for a shot at his fourteenth term. Now completing his twenty-sixth year in the House of Representatives, he took a lead over three primary opponents in the first returns.

With 10 of 274 polling places in the Tenth Congressional District reported, the voting was going thus:

Perry Jennings Bailes 11, Jenkins 256, Paul W. Smith 37, Wilbert W. Warren 35.

Jenkins Appears Sure Winner

Jenkins is one of six incumbent Congressmen meeting primary opposition. He appeared certain to win the right to return for reelection next November.

Bender, a former Congressman-at-large, piled up a heavy vote over two opponents.

With 1007 of the State's 9736 polling places reported, Bender had 26,626, Richard B. Kay of Lakewood 4072, S. A. Ringer of Leesburg 2467.

Over in the 11th District, incumbent Walter E. Brehm of Millersport ran ahead of his opponent, Tecco of Dover

3 More File For Race in Virginia 8th

Virginia's impending Eighth District congressional race became a four-way contest yesterday, as three more candidates qualified with the State Board of Elections for primary consideration.

Latest entries in the field are Hal Flood Hughes of Arlington and Tyrrell Krum of Vienna, both Republicans, and Lieut. Comdr. Herman Keaney Kopp of Engleside, a Democrat. They are seeking the seat held by Representative Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, who already has filed for the Democratic nomination.

While both Hughes and Krum had announced previously they would seek the Republican nomination, the entry of Kopp in the Democratic race came as a surprise to political observers in the district. A Navy pilot, Kopp is currently assigned to the Navy Department's Bureau of Aeronautics here, but is slated to resign from active service May 15.

U. S. Studies Britain's Sterling Balances Under Hint Cooperation in Asia Is Difficult

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

Should America's foreign lending program be used to scale down some of the nine billion dollars which Britain owes abroad? This is the question under study by the State Department.

The suggestion, which apparently was only hinted at in a recent British memorandum, has caused cries of anguish in certain congressional quarters. It sounded like asking the United States to assume Britain's foreign debt.

The nine billion dollars make up what is called Britain's sterling balances. During the war she was unable to pay her creditors in goods, but let them run up huge credits in London. The assumption was that with the war over, England would convert to peacetime trade and gradually repay the debts.

These balances were accumulated in different ways. Australia let Britain have the dollars American troops spent in that country, and accepted sterling in return. Egypt, Iraq, India and Burma earned their deposits by provisioning the Allied troops in the Near East and Asia. The accounts of Greece, Norway and the Netherlands represent payments by British insurance companies for ships sunk by enemy action.

When the war was over this debt came to 3.4 billion pounds. Today the total figure is about 3.3 billion, which would suggest that the British have not made much progress in paying them off. However, the totals are misleading, as we shall see.

Chronic Drain

When the war was over, Britain expected to work off these balances with exports. She could not do it at once, for there was not enough peacetime production. So she made agreements with her creditors to release only a part of the sterling balances, and to keep the others temporarily in blocked accounts

About half the debt was tied up in this manner. In her anxiety to work off the backlog of claims, however, Britain began to release large sums before she could really meet the demand for goods.

The result was a chronic drain on her resources. Exports which went to satisfy old debts earned no goods in return. Even American aid, which was intended to assist Britain herself, went in large part to produce exports for repayment of the war debts.

If this had not occurred, Britain would today be paying her own way. But while she was paying off old claims, so much capital fled from the country that it quickly ran up new claims. That is why the total sterling debt is barely below the 1945 level. Britain, in short, has been on a treadmill.

World trade today is a tangled skein in very large measure because of the peculiar status of sterling. Sterling used to be an international currency, financing most of the world's trade. Today it cannot perform this function because—thanks to the huge sterling balances—nobody knows what it is really worth.

We have long put pressure on the British to do something about these balances: scale them down, or fund them into a long-term stable debt so that they will not continue to oppress world trade.

Can Only Pay Own Way

But until now the British resisted every suggestion for getting this debt out of the way. For one thing, they look on the balances as a continuing backlog of demand for their goods. In a depression this assured market would keep their export industries at work.

For another thing, Britain has recognized her responsibilities to creditors which are much poorer than she. India and Pakistan have desperately needed help in these first years of independenc. In the last two years Britain has paid off some 500 million pounds of debt to them.

What, really, was Britain's suggestion in this memorandum to the Department of State? Apparently no more than a hint, if it was anything so definite, that any aid we are planning to give the democracies of Asia be considered to replace some of her obligations in that part of the world.

In short, the London government has belatedly recognized that she has not the strength to carry the load of assistance in Southeast Asia. There is nothing "astounding" about this. Five years of tough experience have made the fact plain beyond argument. Britain today can pay her way, but she can no longer pay the way of others.

In Europe we have recognized and assumed the burden of help to free governments. It is now up to us to decide how far we intend to go in Asia.

Dulles Talks At Post Book Lunch May 11

John Foster Dulles, author of "War or Peace," will speak at The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon in the Hotel Statler Thursday, May 11.

Dulles

Dulles, a native of Washington, is a grandson of John Watson Foster, Secretary of State in President Benjamin Harrison's administration, and a nephew of Robert Lansing, Secretary of State in the Wilson administration. Dulles, himself, has won a considerable reputation as a student of foreign affairs, and is a special consultant to Secretary of State Acheson.

In "War or Peace," published several weeks ago by Macmillan, Dulles preaches preparedness without hysteria, and faith in success without hostilities. A Republican, he is an advocate of a bipartisan foreign policy.

He also believes that the United Nations should be the cornerstone of American foreign policy.

Also speaking at the luncheon will be Mrs. Louise Hall Tharp, author of "The Peabody Sisters of Salem"; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, author of "Faith is Power—For You," and Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court, author of "Of Men and Mountains."

The 1 p. m. luncheon in the Statler's Presidential Room will be the fourth and final one in the fifth season of The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheons.

Tickets are priced at $3.00, and available at bookstores.

Men's Underwear to Get Historic Survey

London, May 2 (U.P.).—Dr. G. Willet Cunningham, honorary adviser to the Manchester Gallery of English Costume, announced today that he intends to find out what kind of underwear knights of old used to wear under their armor, if any. He will seek to trace the course of underwear up through the Victorian red flannel era.

"Plenty has been said and written about women's underclothing down through the ages but nobody ever seemed to bother about the men."

Hoffman Sees Red Rigidity Causing Loss of Satellites

theless, the tensions below are increasing, he said.

Columnist Walter Lippmann, on the same "Winning the Peace" forum, supported Hoffman's contention.

Pointing to Yugoslavia, the columnist told the businessmen the "breakaway has already begun" and called Tito's break with the Kremlin "the most important event since the end of the war."

Poland would follow Yugoslavia's lead tomorrow, said Lippmann, "if it had an open frontier to the West."

Lippman declared peace can be maintained in Europe through the containing power of America's "long-range striking power." In neither Europe or Asia are Communist victories as sweeping as some pessimists tend to believe, he said.

Looking to the remaining two years of the Marshall Plan, Hoffman said "we must accomplish in 25 months what might, under less compelling circumstances, require 25 years."

He said a "near miracle" has thus far been accomplished in western Europe, and for that reason "we have, perhaps, the right to expect a full-fledged miracle" in the future.

To this end he declared Europe must "form a single large market, within which quantitative restrictions on movement of goods, monetary barriers to the flow of payments, and eventually all tariffs, will be permanently swept away."

Vorys Wants More Law

Speaking on the same platform, Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) said "we need more law and less of the fencing of diplomats to win the peace."

Development of a strengthened United Nations into "some sort of a world government open to all nations," he said, should be the "spearhead of our ideological offensive."

President Eugene Holman of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, urged the Nation's business leaders to increase imports as a positive means to bolster their domestic prosperity.

The dollar gap would be closed, he suggested, if the United States brought up imports to the 1925-29 level—or 5 percent of the national income. Imports now represent about 3 percent of the total economy, he said.

At one of several luncheon discussions, Edwin G. Nourse, former head of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, brough several Chamber members to their feet by opposing current moves to cut excise taxes this year.

"We can better postpone reform of the tax system than insist on getting relief at the expense of adding another billion or so to the deficit which is a more basic threat to our prosperity," he said.

Estimating the 1951 deficit might reach at least 7.3 billions instead of the anticipated 5.1 billions, he spoke out against the tendency to boost military expenditures "everytime Joe Stalin throws a scare into us."

This country must learn to say "Nuts", in the language of General McAuliffe of the Battle of the Bulge fame," said Nourse, "when an industrially primitive and illiterate country tries to bluff us as to our respective abilities to wage industrialized warfare."

He repeatedly warned against building up a powerful military force at the expense of a sound economy.

Describing himself as a "more old-fashioned" person who does not understand deficit-financing, Nourse conceded that "you cannot simply kick the 6 or 7 billion dollar deficit out from under the market" without creating mounting inventories and unemployment.

He proposed a practical timetable be adopted for balancing the budget, aimed at perhaps getting the country out of the red by fiscal 1952.

Another warning against excessive military spending was sounded on the "Battle of the Budget Bulge" forum by Assistant Secretary of Defense Marx Leva. He gave a fighting defense of his department's economy program, stating that military spending would be 1½ billions higher this year were it not for self-imposed departmental overhead savings.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), a Senate economy bloc leader, cracked back to the same audience that there still are "2706 public-relations men on the Department of Defense payroll."

If Congress fails in piecemeal outlay cuts, he said, "it should not hesitate to resort to the arbitrary and, perhaps, harsh, device of across-the-board cuts."

One on the Aisle—

An Ambitious Film Opens Novel Plaza

By Richard L. Coe

THE PLAZA, downtown's newest picture house, opened last night as a benefit for the Kiwanis Crippled Children's Clinic.

"Salt to the Devil," a new British film inspired by Pietro di Donato's novel, "Christ in Concrete," is the opening attraction, a moving story about a group of people whose lives are taken for granted—the bricklayers who create man's buildings. Both the author and Sam Wanamaker, star of the picture, were in last night's top-bracket audience.

The theater, just off the southeast corner of New York ave. and 14th st., is neat, intimate and possessed of several novelties. It seats 300, has a new type of screen that does away with the distortions you usually find when you sit too close or too far to one side. Two new gambits are designed for those who have to wait for seats. There's a seat-check plan, which means you are given numbered aluminum checks as you enter the theater, should there be a full house. You wait in the downstairs lounge and every so often numbers are announced as seats are vacated.

The downstairs lobby contains also a 17-seat television theater, chairs facing a 16-inch TV screen. There's also an art gallery, without which these days no minipalazzo is complete. Samuel Bookatz is the first artist for the Plaza to honor.

Now to the picture.

Strictly speaking, "Salt to the Devil" is not a screen version of "Christ in Concrete," but a variation on the same theme by the novel's author, relating the life of Geremio and Annunziata and what happened in the years just before little Paul of "Christ in Concrete" embarked on his formidable job of supporting a family of eight at the age of 12.

What distinguished the novel was di Donato's style, a curious combination of ignorance of literary rules and a fine, inner eye for beauty. As much characters as flesh-and-blood people were Job and Tenement. As beautiful as the most inspired iambic pentameters were the inverted word orders and the surging allusions in the speech. With deep Italian religiosity and with the superstitious dicta of the poor, di Donato's prose had the flavor of Italian translated for one who knows not the language.

"SALT TO THE DEVIL," Eagle-Lion release produced for J. Arthur Rank by Rod Geiger and N. A. Bronsten in England. Screen play by Ben Barzman from a treatment of his own novel. "Christ in Concrete," by Pietro di Donato. Music by Benjamin Frankel. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. At the Plaza.

The Story

"Salt to the Devil" concerns a young Italo-American, Geremio, who lures a bride from Italy to America with the promise that he will have a home of her own for her. This he has not, though he's made a down payment. They strive and save, but they never do achieve the thousand they must have.

Instead of the large brood Geremio and Annunziata had in "Christ in Concrete," they have only three children, and instead of the spiritual strength of Geremio, which was one of the most striking features of the character in the book, he's now treated to the usual movie Other Woman. This triangle is decidedly a trite addition for an untrite story.

As the years go by, through the depression and through the disappointment about the house, Geremio battles his way to Godliness, but on a Good Friday afternoon there's an accident and he drowns in a sea of concrete. That an insurance company pays off $1000, the sum the couple had labored so long to collect, is ironic, but this new twist to the story totally lacks the diffused, impressionistic quality of the original.

To have attempted the switch from one medium to the other is a considerable try, for a literary style rarely lives after being transplanted to celluloid. The language often does come across in that manner referred to above and not a few of the scenes are stirring for their compassion—which is the essence of what di Donato was trying to do. But the compromises that replace the purely word-telling have not been impressive; the inward purity of these people does not shine through as it did in words and the triangle introduction is lazy pandering.

Edward Dmytryck directed the picture last summer in England, using a few American players but mostly British or Italian nationalities. The result is curiously satisfying, giving that breadth of humanity necessary to such a theme.

Wanamaker is robustly tender as Geremio and Lea Padovani is splendid as his wife. You'll also like Charles Goldner as the unfortunate Luigi. The author wrote the adaptation, from which Ben Barzman created his screen play.

MODEL QUEEN: Shirley Talbott, in the cast of "Tish," being presented by the Stella Maris Players in St. Gabriel's Parish Hall on Grant Circle for its scholarship fund tonight at 8:15. This winter Shirley represented Washington at the New Orleans Mardi Gras

Dance Program at Howard U. Fine Arts Festival Feature

By Paul Hume

Howard University devoted its Festival of Fine Arts to the dance last night.

Rankin Chapel was crowded to the doors with an audience gathered to watch the university's modern dance group, and later in the evening to see Pearl Primus and her dancers.

The dance program at the university is directed by Erika Thimey, who danced only once during the evening. Her choreography occupied about half the concert, the rest being the work of the student dancers themselves.

The outstanding group achievement of the program was the Harriet Tubman Suite. The suite is designed in tribute to the courageous woman who became known as "The General" of the underground railroad during the Civil War. It makes effective use of both solo and choral singing, which was handsomely supplied by the university choir, directed by Warner Lawson.

In the suite, the evening's best ensemble designs appeared. There was point to hitherto limited gestures, and the character of Tubman herself was admirably conveyed by Vernetta Barrett.

Miss Barrett also contributed a good study of Hamlet earlier in the program. Her solo starts slowly but achieves its point within a short space of time. It is, unfortunately, danced to inappropriate music from Prokofieff's Scythian Suite. A more suitable score would benefit the dance considerably.

Other brief studies and group work varied from immature conceptions of children, through an inconclusive satire on Americanism, to a purposeless work on the meaning of the Book of Job. The stylized rigidity of that portion of dance technique which Miss Thimey employs is not broad enough to convey half the emotions attempted.

The university has a fine potential dance program. If men could be added to the ensembles, and some breadth of feeling, it would have a real success.

House Votes to Let Mrs. Knauff Remain

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill to allow GI bride Mrs. Ellen Knauff to remain in this country despite immigration service expulsion orders.

Mrs. Knauff, German-born wife of Kurt W. Knauff, who now works for occupation authorities in Frankfort, Germany, has been held on Ellis Island nearly two years on grounds she is a doubtful security risk.

Mrs. Knauff told a congressional committee she believed the alleged evidence against her came from a jealous rival. She said she never had been given a hearing or trial.

Howard Shows Norway Tribute

IN COMPLIMENT to Norway, whose government last fall was their host for an unprecedented tour of Scandinavia, the Howard University Players are presenting H. Wiers-Jenssen's "The Witch."

Strictly speaking, this is an English adaptation by Poet Laureate John Masefield, who completed the work in 1908. But the feel and setting of the drama are Bergen of the late sixteenth century, a period of flashing religious beliefs and superstitions. The production, which will run through Saturday evening in the minute Spaulding Hall on the campus, is the drama department's contribution in the university's current Festival of Fine Arts.

The story will be familiar to those who last year at the Dupont saw Carl Driers' "Days of Wrath," a Danish film of the same story. A young woman is married to an aging minister, whose son comes home after years in the German universities. The young wife protects a woman accused of being a witch, inciting suspicion in her mother-in-law and in her husband—recollections of her own mother's accusation years before.

In her youthful loneliness, the young woman falls in love with her stepson, and in her rage at her predicament shocks her elderly husband into a spell which causes his death. Her superstitious contemporaries revive, and appear to prove, the charge that she is a witch.

Effective But Unexciting

Such a story having been seen so recently and memorably on the screen, its shock appeal is lost at a second sitting. Nor is Masefield's language all one would have expected, though its 40 years may have distilled some of its effect.

Physically, the Howard Players make much of their assignment, and both the setting of William Bondheill and the lighting of Michael Curry are effective. The players have the mechanics of their roles in hand without, however, rising to that pitch of excitement the story demands.—R. L. C.

Senate May Vote Today on Crime Inquiry

and long executive sessions before any public hearings. He said he already had requests from some 19 cities to come in and look into interstate crime angles there.

Plans $17,500 Counsel

Kefauver said he hoped to pay up to $17,500 for a chief committee counsel in order to hire "an exceptionally good lawyer with experience in criminal investigations and trials." He commended the various citizens' crime commissions for their work and said what he hoped to do was to find out the facts as to the extent of interstate rackets and uncover the criminal mobs and gambling syndicates which the commissions have charged exist.

The Senate consideration came toward the end of a day's testimony before the Senate Commerce sub-committee which is considering a bill to ban use of phones, telegraph and radio for transmitting gambling information.

Highlights of the testimony were:

Officials of Continental Press Service, the Nation-wide wire service which carries racing information, defended their business as strictly legal, denied it supplied bookies in Kansas City, Mo., and declared that gamblers Frank Costello, Frank Erickson and James J. Carroll have nothing to do with it.

Profit of $692,207.64

Continental last year took in 32,366, 648.99, had operating costs of $1,674,441.35 and a profit of $692,207.64, all of which (less "more than" half a million in Federal taxes) was paid to Edward J. McBride.

The income, according to Joseph M. Lebit, a one-time telegrapher who now is Continental's accountant, came from about 24 clients paying anything from $6000 a week down to only $20. He said the New York Daily News pays the low figure but declined to say who the big customers are though he did furnish a list. It included Howard Sports Daily in Baltimore and similar "sports publishers" around the Nation as well as the Associated Press, United Press and Trans-Radio Press (which paid $85, $60 and $50 a week).

But Lebit and Thomas F. Kelly, Continental's general manager, contended they didn't know who buys the racing information from their customers. At this Chairman McFarland (D., Ariz.) said he couldn't "help feeling you know the distributors are selling to bookies." Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) put it this way:

"You know damn well this news goes to bookies. Why don't you admit it?"

Contend Service is Legal

But the Continental officials and their attorney, Walter E. Gallagher of Washington, contended the service is entirely legal and the company does not know of any illegal use of its product.

Tobey made it uncomfortable for the wire officials after they had testified that William Molasky, owner of the Continental client (Pioneer News) in St. Louis, had "a very high reputation." On the basis of a tip handed him by a reporter, Tobey brought out the fact that Molasky had, in fact, served a year and a day for income tax evasion. Tobey accused the wire officials of "falsifying" and "concealing" facts.

Kelly said Continental has no clients in Kansas City despite the recent Federal grand jury report there naming Continental as the source of racing information fed a firm owned by Charles Gargotta, recently slain, and other gambling figures.

Kelly said he never knew Gargotta and never dealt with him. He suggested the race news might have been "bootlegged." McFarland said the committee would get the facts before it was through, if necessary calling the grand jury foreman.

Horsemen Point to Murders

Spencer J. Drayton, executive secretary of the Thoroughbred Racing Association, said that four murders "show the strong arm influence" used to control the race wire services. He named the dead men as Gargotta, Charles Binnagio, the Kansas City political boss slain the same day, Jim Regan of Chicago, one-time race wire boss, and Bugsby Siegel in Los Angeles.

But Drayton, who said his group wants "no part of illegal bookmaking," objected to so much of the measure under committee consideration that McFarland remarked:

"You seem to be for the bill but against all the parts of it."

Two other witnesses objected to the proposed legislation—J. Samuel Perlman, publisher of Daily Racing Form and the New York Morning Telegraph, and Jacob Brenner, president of Armstrong Daily Sports.

Brenner said his company publishes a scratch sheet in Washington under the Armstrong name. But he said it "definitely" does not serve any bookies.

Both Perlman and Brenner argued that any such Federal law would create more crime than it would stop because of the public desire to gamble.

Two on Kansas City Police Board Are Ousted

Jefferson City, Mo., May 2 (AP).—Gov. Forrest Smith "removed" two members of the Kansas City Police Board today and then appointed three new members.

Ousted were Hampton S. Chambers and R. Robert Cohn. New members are: Albert F. Hillix, former president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, who succeeds J. L. (Tuck) Milligan, who resigned at the Governor's request; George Fise, a former police board member, who succeeds Chambers, and Jearney Wornall, a banker, who succeeds Cohn.

The board, a State agency that runs the police department in Kansas City, has been under fire since the slaying of Charles Binaggio, gang and political figure.

Smith said he told the new board members to "enforce all the laws and do their duty."

Hearing Set Today On Unemployment Compensation

Spokesmen for Washington business sand labor groups are slated to testify on a bill to increase District unemployment compensation benefits in a hearing at 10 a. m. today.

The hearing will be in the Senate District committee room in the Capitol. It will be conducted by the full Senate District committee, headed by Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.).

The committee is also slated to take testimony on bills to apply the minimum wage law to men here, and to set up standard practices for payment of wages.

Children's Play Program

A recreational program for children, particularly at the new Four Mile Run playground, will be discussed by members of the Fort Barnard Heights Citizens' Association in Arlington at a meeting today at 8 p .m. in the Rothery School, 2310 Seminary rd., Alexandria.

Memorial Tribute To Be Paid Hatfield

Memorial tribute will be paid the late Judge Charles S. Hatfield of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals at the court at 10 a. m. Thursday. The proceedings will be conducted by attorneys admitted to practice before the court.

Judge Hatfield was appointed to the Customs and Patent Appeals bench on March 4, 1923, and was on the bench when he died last February 9.

Net Doubled In 3 Months, RCA Reports

By S. Oliver Goodman

Why radio-television stocks have boomed this year was explained yesterday by David Sarnoff, board chairman of Radio Corporation of America.

Sarnoff

Sarnoff reported at the annual stockholders meeting that RCA netted $11,236,231, or 75 cents a share for the first quarter this year. That was more than double the net of $5,932,083 or 37 cents a share in the first three months of 1949.

Television, he added, has accounted for about 50 percent of RCA's gross income in 1949, while in the first quarter of 1950 it was responsible for nearly 60 percent.

Television, he declared, "already has achieved the stature of a billion-dollar-a-year industry.

"No American industrial enterprise ever moved ahead so rapidly in so short a time. It has wrought a revolution in research, manufacturing, sales, servicing, broadcasting and programming, and its expansion is being accelerated in 1950. In February . . . RCA Victor produced its millionth television set."

Based on industry estimates, Sarnoff said that about five million television receivers will be added this year to the four million in use at the end of 1949.

SALES DROP: Mergenthaler Linotype Co. yesterday reported net sales of $10,096,360 for the six months ended March 31, as compared with $11,437,775 in the first half of the previous fiscal year. Net income in the latest period amounted to $958,023, against $1,791,289 in the six months ended March 31, 1949. Mergenthaler received $175,314 in dividends from the London subsidiary, against $252,349 in the same period a year ago.

ODD LOTS: Childs Co., restaurant chain, and Blum's of San Francisco, candy maker, are discussing a merger on a share-for-share basis . . . General Motors produced 313,909 passenger cars and trucks in April, 62,546 greater than in same 1949 month . . . National Airlines has retired its long-term debt two years ahead of schedule . . . Studebaker Corp. has added 1550 workers in the past two weeks to step up its production by 160 cars a day . . . An underwriting group of 70 firms yesterday offered 250,000 shares of Spencer Chemical Co. common stock at $35 a share. The block is from certain stockholders and no part of proceeds go to the company.

AUTO SALES: Washington sales of new autos totaled 7185 for the first quarter, an increase of 591 or 9 per cent over the like 1949 period. March sales of 2844 reached a high for the year, and compared with 2497 in the same 1949 month, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

ANALYSIS: Esso Standard Oil Co. bases its advertising on three basic principles, members of the Washington Advertising Club were told at a Statler luncheon yesterday. Robert M. Gray, manager of Esso's advertising-sales promotion division, said that first fundamental is to find out what the public wants; second, make sure that you can meet those wants; third, tell the public "over and over and over again" that you can and do fulfill those desires.

PEPCO NET: Potomac Electric Power Co. reported first-quarter net income of $1,246,876 or 32 cents a common share, compared with $1,374,214 or 43 cents a common share in the same 1949 period.

Hancock, Babb Get Top Posts In Lever Bros.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Lever Brothers Co., one of the Nation's largest soap manufacturers, today announced a sweeping change in company management.

The new top executives and a completely new board of directors were named by the company which formerly was headed by Charles Luckman, know as the boy wonder of the soap business. Luckman, who became president of the company in 1946 at the age of 37, resigned in January after a disagreement with the parent company, owned by Anglo-Dutch interests.

John M. Hancock, a partner in the investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers, was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Jervis J. Babb, executive vice president of S. C. Johnson & Son, Inc., wax makers, was elected president.

The new board is composed of Hancock and Babb and William H. Burkhart, vice president of Lever Brothers Co.; J. Laurence Heyworth, director of Lever Brothers & Unilever, Ltd.; Franklin J. Lunding, president of the Jewel Tea Co., Inc., and chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago; Charles A. Massey, president of Lever Brothers, Ltd., Toronto; Robert B. Smallwood, president of Thomas J. Lipton, Inc., and Louis F. Watermulder, vice president of Lever Brothers Co.

The previous board was composed entirely of officials of the Lever Brothers Co..

Atlanta Trolley Strike Called For Better Pay and Pensions

Atlanta, May 2 (AP).—Georgia Power Co.'s trolley operators today called a strike for Wednesday's wee hours, leaving some 350,000 commuters to travel by rule of thumb.

A union official said the AFL union members would walk off the job upon completion of their regular runs, the last of which is scheduled at 3:10 a. m., barring a last-minute settlement.

The strike call was issued after the failure of an eleventh-hour effort by Federal conciliators to settle the dispute over a 12-cent hourly wage hike and an improved pension plan.

By a vote of 1019 to 123 members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America approved the strike action yesterday.

The union asked for a pension plan, in addition to the wage demand, which would allow them to contribute 3 percent of their salaries and share in the administration.

Under the present pension plan the employes contribute nothing and have nothing to say in its administration.

Pittsburgh Bus Drivers Strike for Wage Hike

Pittsburgh, May 2 (AP).—The 130 bus drivers of Harmony Short Lines went on strike this morning demanding a 23-cents-an-hour wage increase.

The bus company serves an average of 150,000 patrons daily with 91 regularly scheduled buses in the Ohio-Allegheny Valley west of Pittsburgh as far north as Erie.

John T. Morgan, International vice president of the AFL Amalgamated Street Electric and Motor Coach Employes Union, declared:

"The company has refused to negotiate. The next move is up to the company."

Chrysler Corp. Accuses Union of Scuttling Peace

Detroit, May 2 (AP).—Strikebound Chrysler Corp. accused the CIO United Auto Workers today of "scuttling" any settlement of the 98-day Chrysler strike.

"Settle one thing, and another that you thought was settled bobs up again," said Herman L. Weckler, company vice president and general manager.

Murray Tells Of Big Profits, Joblessness

Boston, May 2 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray today denounced "the paradoxical condition of unprecedented profits and huge unemployment."

"Corporate interests are extracting from the consumers' pocketbook wholly unwarranted profits," he said in an address to 2000 delegates attending the CIO Textile Workers Union national convention.

"The trouble with our economic standards is that we still have too many grasping, greedy, selfish people," he said.

Declaring the profits and unemployment situation "unparalleled," Murray said that last month "we had approximately 4,250,000 unemployed workers in the United States."

"And despite the ravages of this unemployment situation" he said, "profits in most American industry are at unprecedented highs."

Citing what he called "examples," Murray said the General Motors Corp. last year netted profits of 656 million dollars which, comes to a profits of $1700 per worker per year.

Murray said that "the burden incident to the making of those profits must be carried by the consumer—hence the inflationary process and hence all the misery that trails in the wake of these inflationary conditions."

The convention indorsed the Brannan price support plan and favored a $1 an hour national minimum wage.

Black George Beats Middleground in Derby Trial

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WHEN A PITCHER of the St. Louis Browns is in trouble like say with the bases full of Yankees and nobody out, you'd probably be correct in saying his chief need is for a doctor.

In fact, the Browns have already anticipated his need. Step right up Dr. David F. Tracy.

POVICH

You a doctor, Dr. Tracy?

"On two counts—I am a doctor of psychology and a doctor of metaphysics."

How's that again?

"I am a graduate of the University of Southern California with a doctor's degree in psychology. And I am an ordained minister in the Divine Church of Metaphysics that is incorporated under the ecclesiastical laws of the State of New York."

Anything else?

"I am the founder and director of the American School of Modern Hypnotism in New York."

You a hypnotist?

"Yes. I practice positive suggestion to the subconscious mind."

What is metaphysics?

"Boiled down, it is the art of mind healing."

And you are in the hire of the St. Louis Browns?

"I have been engaged by the Browns to rid their players of their defeatist complexes and transmit to them a relaxation and composure that will enable them to better use their native skills?"

HOW DO YOU help the pitcher with the bases full of Yankees?

"He knows now that he must step off the rubber, and take three deep breaths."

But the umpire will not call each one of those deep breaths a strike on the hitter?

"No. But the pitcher is now relaxed. He's rid of his mental excitement. The deep breathing pulls the blood down from his head, and he's more composed and reassured."

After that he's on his own?

"Yes, but he's no longer panicky, or angry at himself or his situation. Anger cuts off clear thinking."

And the Browns' players believe all of that?

"None of the players are compelled to listen to me. They come to me of their own volition, and all but one of them have sought my help."

Who was the player who balked?

"I won't mention any names. But anyway, this fellow said 'I'm not going to that guy. People will think I'm nutty'. He's back in the minors now. I could have helped him if he weren't so nutty."

WHAT ELSE do you do for the pitchers?

"I give them the confidence that helps their control. I tell them they wouldn't be up here in the majors if they didn't have native ability."

How do you help their control?

"I have them sit with me during batting practice. I show them that even when a pitcher is getting the ball over the plate with nothing on it, the hitters have a hard time making their hits drop safe. I show them that any man who is trying to hit a round ball with a round bat has a tough job."

Anything else?

"I demonstrate to them that the base on balls is the worst thing that can happen to a pitcher. I point out how it demoralizes not only the pitcher but the rest of the team. There is no defense for a base on balls. Nobody can come up with a great play behind you on a walk."

YOU TELL them what and how to throw?

"No. I tell them no pitcher should aim for the corners of the plate. No pitcher is good enough. I tell them to aim for the heart of the plate with all the stuff they can throw, and that's when they catch the corners with their good pitches."

You help the hitters, too?

"Yes. I pound home the idea they must relax. Tenseness, gripping that bat too tight, tightens not only the wrist but the back and shoulder muscles and they're not free. I tell them to step out of the box between pitches to loosen up their minds, pick up the resin bag, do anything to relax."

AND IN the field?

"I keep 'em yelling encouragement to each other. When they're yelling, they're relaxing themselves. They don't have time to think of their own troubles."

You say you are a psychologist, not a psychiatrist?

"I am not a psychiatrist. They treat mental diseases. I treat human behavior."

Which players are your best subjects?

"The bright boys, with imagination. They react to positive suggestion. I would be no help to the moronic mind."

What do you call self-hynosis?

"I will demonstrate better than define it. Let me have your lighted cigarette. This lighted end, you see, is 1734 degrees fahrenheit. And this is self-hynosis as you notice that, without pain, I stub it out on the end of my tongue."

Where does all that leave the Browns in the league standings?

"They will be the most relaxed team in the league."

Cobb's 'Weighty' Suggestion Helps Gene Sarazen's Golf

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of anecdotes about the colorful golf career of Gene Sarazen, who will appear in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Tournament June 3-4 at Army-Navy Country Club.)

By Gene Sarazen

A talk I had with Ty Cobb helped me correct my grip during one off-year. I asked Ty if he had worked out any novel training methods for baseball. He told me that during the pregame workouts he put lead in his shoes. When this extra weight was removed when the game began, his legs seemed wonderfully light and he felt that he could tear around the bases or really go get that ball in the outfield. "What you ought to do, Gene," Ty counseled, "is put lead in your clubhead when you practice." I hadn't given Ty's suggestion serious consideration before, but now I made myself a 30-ounce driver, a club about twice as heavy as the driver I customarily used. I swung this practice club for at least an hour a day to strengthen by grip and groove my are. It worked.

Bucs Blast Spahn, Beat Braves, 6-1

Pittsburgh, May 2 (AP).—Wally Westlake continued the pride of the Pirates tonight, smashing out a first inning triple with the bases loaded to help Pittsburgh gain a 6-1 victory over Boston's Braves.

Murry Dickson won his second game of the year by limiting the Braves to five singles. A crowd of of 24,115 sat through intermittent showers to watch the Pirates break a three game losing streak.

Lefty Warren Spahn suffered his first defeat of the year after winning three in a row. His own wildness and a flurry of Pirate hits knocked him out of the box in the opening inning.

Spahn walked Pete Castiglione, fanned Ted Beard and then issued walks to Ralph Kiner and Nanny Fernandez to load the bases. Westlake unloaded them in a hurry with a triple to right.

First Baseman Jack Phillips followed through with a single scoring Westlake. Danny Murtaugh also singled and that hit sent Spahn to the showers. Bob Hogue was called in to retire the side.

The Pirates added two more runs in the seventh on just one hit. Castiglione singled and Beard sacrificed. Kiner drew an intentional pass. A balk by Dick Donovan who went in the fifth advanced the runners. Castiglione scored on Fernandez' long fly and Kiner raced home on a wild pitch.

McDermott Throttles Tribe, 6-1

DROPO DROPPED—Big Walt Dropo, Red Sox new first baseman, is out at third on a headfirst slide in yesterday's Boston-Cleveland game in Boston. The play developed when Pitcher Maurice McDermott grounded to Joe Gordon at second, who relayed to Al Rosen, covering third. Umpire is Jim Boyer. The Red Sox won, 6-1

Red Sox Lefty Allows 4 Hits, Gordon's Homer Spoils Shutout

Boston, May 2 (AP).—Maurice McDermott, string bean Red Sox left hander, fashioned six consecutive hitless and eight straight runless sessions today as Boston gained a 6-1 victory over Cleveland's Indians.

The great majority of 11,591 paid fans and 747 women guests moaned as Larry Doby beat out an infield hit to start Cleveland's seventh inning and they groaned again in the ninth when old pro Joe Gordon belted a 3-2 pitch over the left field wall for the Indians' only run.

Only other Cleveland hits were Jim Hegan's single off the young pitcher's glove in the eighth and Doby's line drive to right after Gordon belted his homer, his first of the season.

Ted Williams also poled a home run, his fourth of the campaign, into the right-field bull pen for Boston's last run in the seventh inning.

Big Walt Dropo, husky first baseman recalled from Louisville because of an injury to Billy Goodman, came through with a lusty two-run triple squarely between the center and right fielders in a three-run Boston fifth.

The Sox had scored single runs in both the first and second innings before they stowed away the victory in the fifth at the expense of Mike Garcia, first of three Cleveland pitchers.

McDermott struck out eight and walked five as he recorded his second decision against one defeat.

His fast ball was alive and his curve, which he used mostly against lefthanders, was sharp. Four of his five walks were issued to southpaw batters.

Frick Sees 3d League

Toronto, May 2 (AP).—Formation of a third major league is "as inevitable as tomorrow," the president of the National Baseball League said today.

Ford Frick, here for tonight's meet-the-ball-club dinner, said in an interview:

"It might even be that the National and American leagues will first jump to 12 teams before splitting into three leagues. But it has to come."

15 to 1 Shot Wins By 2 in Muddy Going

By Gayle Talbot

Louisville, Ky., May 2 (AP).—Black George, a 3-year-old son of Reaping Reward, got out in front and stayed there against a stretch challenge by Middleground to win today's 1-mile Derby trial by two lengths.

Running on a sloppy track and in a cold rain which never ceased all afternoon, the black colt jumped into the lead as the field of 11 left the chute and never looked back. He rewarded his backers with a whopping $33.20 for each $2 wagered.

King Ranch's Middleground, the short-priced favorite, came up to look at Black George as the field turned into the stretch, but quickly fell back and finished two lengths behind the leader. However, Apprentice Bill Boland riding Middleground never used his whip, whereas Black George was under punishment.

Brookmeade Shows

Immediately after the race Black George's trainer, Ray Barnett, announced he would be a certain starter in Saturday's $100,000 Kentucky Derby if the track is sloppy. The horse is owned by William H. Veeneman of nearby Keeneland, chairman of the board at Churchill Downs.

Brookmeade Stable's Sunglow finished a fast-closing third, 3¾ lengths back of Middleground, with his stablemate, Greek Ship, fourth, another three-quarters back. Middleground paid a scant $3.60 for the place, Sunglow $3.60 for show.

Calumet Farm's Theory, which, coupled with All Blue, started as the second favorite, never got up among the leaders and finished a poor sixth back of Hasty House Farm's Lot O' Luck. It does not look like another Ben Jones Derby.

14 May Go in Derby

Back of Theory, strung out in order and splattered with mud, were stranded, Second Avenue, All Blue, Trumpet King and French Admiral. Second Avenue ran a stanch second to Black

Dodgers Belt Pollet, Smash Cards, 10 to 3

St. Louis, May 2 (AP).—Picking on Howard Pollet for a triple, double, single and home run—in that order—in the sixth, the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers went on a smashing 10 to 3 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals tonight.

Pollet had held the Dodgers hitless the first four innings and gave up just one in the fifth before he weakened.

Jackie Robinson opened the big sixth with a triple. He scored on Carl Furillo's double. Furillo took third on Pollet's wild pitch, and scored when Gil Hodges singled to right. Then Snider cleared the bases. After Poholsky retired two Dodgers, Peewee Reese walked and scored on Bobby Morgan's triple. Jim Russell then singled Morgan home.

Nats, Browns Try Again to Play Tonight

Freshened by a three-day rest—or perhaps rusty because of it—the Nats will try again to play a ball game tonight.

Out of action since Saturday, they were weathered out again last night by rain which washed the scheduled game with the Browns into a twilight-night double-header on June 2.

Managers Bucky Harris and Zach Taylor have announced that they are holding over their pitching choices for tonight's game.

That means Sid Hudson, who was not one of the Nats' best pitchers last season, will be opposed by Ned Garver, who was the Browns' best.

The Browns were given the use of Griffith Stadium yesterday morning for hitting practice. Taylor's complaint that his men haven't been hitting in recent games fell on the understanding ears of Harris, whose men haven't been hitting in recent games, either.

Former High Star To Be Reburied

Staff Sergt. Charles T. (Dinky) Scott, 23, former George Washington High of Alexandria athlete, shot down over Germany in July, 1943, will be reburied at 3 p. m. Thursday in Arlington Cemetery.

Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett C. Scott of 3514 Wilson ave., Alexandria, was a tail gunner in a B-17.

He was a football, baseball, basketball and track star at G. W. High. Since his death, the first game of his school's football season, has been dedicated to him, "The Dinky Scott Memorial Game."

Bloomington, Ind., May 2 (AP).—Indiana University's football team ignored a driving rain to practice for its Cream and Crimson Day intrasquad game Saturday.

Tackle Ed Bosak weighed his uniform before practice. Fourteen pounds 12 ounces.

He weighed it again afterward. Twenty-five pounds 6 ounces.

.446 Hitter Farmed

Baltimore, May 2 (AP).—Catcher Frank Saucier, the highest average hitter in organized baseball last year, was optioned today to San Antonio by the Baltimore Orioles.

Leon Daughtry Fights Tonight

Washington's boxing fans who want to see Leon Daughtry fight Charlie Salas in tonight's 10-round feature at Uline Arena had better plan to arrive an hour earlier than they usually do.

Because of television commitments, and Washington's still being on Eastern Standard Time, the welterweight main event will go on at 9 p. m., instead of the usual 10 o'clock.

Daughtry, Golden Gloves welterweight champ of the District a year ago, is a slight underdog despite two recent winning performances against Charlie Williams in Atlantic City.

Salas, a 21-year old veteran from Phoenix, is given the edge because of his longer professional experience. Salas has had 94 fights, and won 64 of them, 22 on knockouts. He has never been kayoed.

The supporting show has a pair of six rounders bringing together Sam Kelsey and Jo Davis, lightweights, and Willie Coffee and Eddie Gilchrist, bantams. Opening fours, the first of which is set for 8:30, send Kid Rocco against Frank Shields and Jimmy Clark against Johnny Pratt, all middleweights.

Rain Spikes Sports Events

Yesterday's major college and high school sports schedule was practically a washout because of the rain.

The Georgetown-George Washington baseball game set for Griffith Stadium was postponed indefinitely, and the Maryland-Williams and Mary and American U.-Bridgewater games were canceled.

The District of Columbia A.A.U. track and field championships at Catholic University were postponed until Thursday at 3:30 p. m., and officials said that the meet will be held then regardless of the weather.

All five Interhigh League baseball games were postponed.

WILLIE HOPPE, UNBEATABLE AT 62.
(A champion's stroke, at billiards or golf)

'Boy Wonder' of Billiards Still Going Strong at 62

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Willie Hoppe, indestructible champ on another green, yesterday accepted an invitation to appear in the National Celebreties golf tourney at Army-Navy Country Club, June 3-4.

The famed "boy-wonder" of billiards, still on top at 62, was in town for an exhibition at National Press Club with his old sidekick, trickshot artist, Charlie Peterson.

No other titlist in sports comes even close to matching Hoppe's record. He won his first world's title in 1906 at the age of 18 when he defeated Maurice Vignaux, 18.1 balkline champion, in Paris.

Since then, a year hasn't passed without Hoppe reigning supreme in one or another phase of the cue sport. In an unprecedented performance in 1940, he swept 20 games to take over in the new variation of three-cushion billiards.

In February, he defended the title successfully for the tenth straight time.

Hoppe's artistry with the same cue he's been using for 45 years makes the years roll away. Peterson, his intimate, insists Willie's as good as he ever was. An enthusiastic gallery at the Press Club had the same opinion.

A vibrant champ, Hoppe said he's looking forward to a return to the links after a nine-year absence. Certainly, celebrities won't be new to him. They've been flocking to see him play these many years.

Unbelievable as it seems, Hoppe confesses that he doesn't have that sure touch on the golf greens. "My putting's terrible," he smiled, "that's the main reason I gave up the game."

But he promised to blast the ball off the tee. One thing's certain, he will show up.

Peterson recalled a day long ago when he and Hoppe were stranded in Fargo, S. Dak., when a train was snowbound. The boys commandeered a handcar and kept their appointment in the next town the hard way.

Chicago Gets 9 Doubles in 16-Hit Attack

Chicago, May 2.—The Chicago Cubs outlasted the Philadelphia Phillies, 10 to 8, in a loosely played slugfest today before a shivering crowd of 6279.

The Cubs routed Ken Heintzelman with seven runs in the first two innings and remained in the lead all the way. They hammered six hurlers for 16 hits, including nine doubles.

Rudy Kundert, the Philly batboy, was struck in the head by a line foul off the bat of Stan Lopata in the second inning. He recovered consciousness within a few minutes. However, he was carried off the field on a stretcher and taken to Illinois Masonic Hospital for X-rays.

25 at Woodmont Gang Up On One Ball to Save Time

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

EVER HEAR of nine holes of golf being played in eight minutes?

That's the mark a 25-man "golf relay team" will shoot for at Woodmont tomorrow in what will undoubtedly be the fastest round ever played in these parts.

Howard Nordlinger of Woodmont, said that golfers will be stationed at strategic spots on the course and shoot against time. After player No. 1 tees off, golfer No. 2 will be Johnny-on-the-spot to take the second shot the moment the ball stops rolling.

An unbroken chain of players will try to chase the little pellet in and out of nine holes in eight minutes.

The high-jinks are part of Woodmont's opening day ceremonies which also include blind bogey, sweepstakes, driving, putting, and hole-in-one contests.

COMMANDER PAUL Schulz of Army Navy came up with a beautiful eagle in Sunday's steady drizzle . . . On the par 4, 390-yard second hole, Schulz knocked in his second shot from 190 yards out with a three wood.

DANNY BURTON and Bill Swan had a best ball 61 at Anacostia recently . . . six under par. They were playing Red Tanner and Bill Davis and beat them one up in 18 holes. Danny's brother Al is Army Navy's pro . . . Danny was Anacostia club champ in 1948 and was runnerup last year.

Fort Dupont has installed a new drainage system on its second hole. Players report the greens much improved.

Fred Williamson, manager of Fort Dupont, said that Holly Wright, NBC newscaster, narrowly missed a hole-in-one there. Wright's T-shot skittered by the cup a mere two inches. He had to be satisfied with a birdie on the par 3, 190-yard hole.

ANACOSTIA is looking forward to revenge against Norfolk Country Club for a beating inflicted last year at Norfolk. The teams play at Anacostia May 14.

BIG MYSTERY AT BELLE HAVEN: An ancient, curiously carved stone, inscribed with the date "1819," stands in the entrance of Belle Haven's driveway. Pro Tom Ryan and other members are convinced that there's a good story behind it and would like to learn its history.

Black George Surprises in Trial

GOSH, I'M TIRED—Hallieboy, too tired and sleepy to eat, arrives at Louisville, Ky., by van to run in the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Owner Walter Fugate, in surprise move, decided to ship colt from Lincoln, R. I., a trip that took 37 hours

George to the half-mile, but fell back fast in the stretch.

There was nothing in Middleground's race to cause his backers to lose faith. The chunky chestnut ran a steady third to the half and then moved into the second slot at the three-quarters. Some thought he might have moved past the winner in the stretch if Boland had given him a couple of whacks.

The King Ranch beauty was packing 118 pounds as against Black George's 112. Sunglow also was carrying 118 and looked sharp as he made a late move to come up from seventh place in the last quarter.

A trio of Derby favorites—Your Host, Hill Prince and Oil Capitol—passed up today's trial.

Only one winner of the 12 previous trials went on to win the big race on Saturday. That was the great Citation two years ago. Olympia, last year's Trial winner, proved totally incapable of running the additional quarter-mile in the Derby.

Best guesses tonight were that 14 will start in the Derby. Hallieboy, the surprise entry owned by Walter Fugate of Chicamauga, Ga., reached the Downs this morning after a 37½-hour trip down from Providence in a van. He was a weary looking piece of horseflesh.

Phantoms Head Wrestle Show

Billy Darnell, Dutch Schweigert and Ace Freeman take on the "Black Phantom Brothers" and Jim Austeri in a three-man team match heading the Turner's Arena wrestling show tonight.

In the semifinal, Hans Hermann meets Henry Piers.

Commission Tackles Pollution in Potomac

By Happy Walker

THE BATTLE OF Washington's boating fraternity against corrosion will be up for discussion Thursday and Friday in Alexandria when the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin meets at the George Mason Hotel.

Walker

Harold Kemp, District sanitation engineer, and chairman of the commission will preside.

The commission members, composed of officials from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia have been surveying the problem for several years.

Rot and debris have been playing hob with the motors of boats and taxing maintenance work on other parts of the vessels.

RAINED OUT on two successive weekends, the Potomac River Sailing Association will make another attempt to kick off its spring series Sunday off Hains Point. Races are slated for 1:30 and 3:30 p. m. with Thistles, Lightnings, Chesapeake 20s, Comets, Snipes, Penguins and handicap classes.

MEANWHILE, the P.R.S.A. will be host to area sailors at the Corinthian Yacht Club tonight, when Ernest Ratsey will be the principal speaker. Mr. Ratsey, sail-making and veteran ocean-sailing authority, will describe recent developments in sails, gear, models and props.

The get-together, starting at 8 p. m., is open to all interested sailors.

CORINTHIAN YACHT CLUB is all set to greet the 1950 season with an old-fashioned shad bake, flag-raising and dance Sunday on the Anacostia River clubhouse grounds. Plans are completed to entertain an expected four to five hundred members and their guests.

The ceremonies will get under way with the official flag-raising ceremonies at 4 p. m. Staff officers, headed by Commodore Jack Miller, will be on hand to officiate. So will the Sea Scouts.

Lincoln's Assassination in Ford's Theater Realistically Reenacted Here

Curtain up—"Our American Cousin"

The President's box . . . Booth at right

By Tom Keller—The Washington Post

The Washington Post

 WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1950 1B

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

THERE was laughter in the presidential box.

The President and his party were attending a performance of the comedy "Our American Cousin."

As the group entered the box, an argument was under way on stage. Florence was agreeing, "Some people don't see it . . ." and then, as the strains of "Hail to the Chief" rang through the hall, she ad libbed, "But anyone can see this." The players curtseyed deeply.

It was, last night, for the moment, again 8:35 p. m. on the night of April 14, 1865. The play went on. In the last act, Asa was chiding Mrs. Montchessington as a "sock-doggling old woman."

In the presidential box, John Wilkes Booth leaned over Abraham Lincoln, said "Sic semper tryannis," and shot him in the head. He wrestled with the presidential aide, Major Rathbone and stabbed him. Then waving a hunting knife Booth jumped to the stage, shouted, "The South is avenged!" and hobbled off to his waiting horse.

Mrs. Lincoln screamed, "Stop that man, stop that man! The President has been shot."

THE curtains closed. Eighty-five years ago, they closed at Ford's Theater. Last night, when the assassination of Lincoln was reenacted, they closed at the Coolidge Auditorium in the Congressional Library. There is a ban against "theatrical performances" at Ford's now.

And last night, "Lincoln" was shot by Dr. Otto Eisenschiml, Lincoln student, who used a plastic derringer minus trigger for his act.

It was Eisenschiml who conceived the reenactment presented for the joint conventions here of the National Society of Autograph Collectors, the Washington Lincoln Group, and the Chicago Civil War Round Table of which Dr. Eisenschiml is a member.

IDEA for the drama grew out of a request to Dr. Eisenschiml to speak during the current conventions.

"I have too much sympathy for the audience," he said "to bore them with page after page—nobody knows what you've said when you finish, anyhow."

So Dr. Eisenschiml solicited help of the Library of Congress and of George Washington University, whose dramatics classes lent talent (Professor Edward Mangum took the part of Lincoln), and after two months' planning the production was ready.

Dr. Eisenschiml, who describes himself as "one of a collection of nuts who get together once a month and talk about the Civil War," plotted out time and action to the nth degree for the reenactment, for which he was narrator.

He was given an assist by a Baltimore costumer, who lent period costumes for the cast and the Lincoln party. The "American Cousin" costumes, except one too large for the 1950 wearer, are reputedly the same as those worn by the cast when Lincoln was assassinated. The play has not been presented since, Dr. Eisenschiml said.

DR. EISENSCHIML took one liberty with his set—he didn't call for the same 12-foot drop from the President's box that Booth took.

"I'd be crippled like Booth if I did," he explained, "and the audience would be cockeyed watching the whole thing."

To Dr. Eisenschiml, the most interesting things that happened after the assassination are those least discussed.

No action was ever taken against John F. Parker, the presidential guard, who let Booth pass when he presented him with a visitor's card just outside the box. No newspaper ever printed an interview with Parker.

Would President Lincoln have lived with modern surgery?

DR. EISENSCHIML'S theory is that a modern bullet, because of its high velocity, would not have damaged Lincoln's brain as much as the dum-dum projectile of Booth's derringer.

He believes the physicians who attended the dying Chief Executive were improper in using "unclean hands" to probe for the bullet in his head.

He thinks a transfusion might have prolonged the life of Lincoln, but believes, too, that had Lincoln lived, he would not have had use of his faculties, and might have been subject to Jacksonian epilepsy.

To get modern medical opinion on the Lincoln case, Dr. Eisenschiml last night asked from the Coolidge stage to the 450 persons who witnessed the drama:

"Is there a doctor in the house?" and Dr. Walter Boyd, a Washington physician, was there to discuss the 1950 medical version of Lincoln's assassination.

Many Agencies Face Personnel 'Freeze'

By Jerry Kluttz

A personnel "freeze" is looming for a score of Federal departments and agencies. It's the same old story—money troubles. This is the picture:

The White House weeks ago asked Congress to appropriate about 111 million dollars to help many Government agencies pay part of the cost of last year's 15 pay raise bills. The agencies were told they would have the money by this time.

But the House has been tied up for more than five weeks on the omnibus appropriation bill and nothing will be done about a deficiency until it is disposed of. It now appears improbable that the Congress will approve a deficiency bill before a dozen or more agencies go "broke."

What to do? Suggestions have been made that the agencies be allowed to spend the unappropriated deficiencies, a plan reported to have been received coldly on Capitol Hill. Meantime, the agencies facing financial embarrassment are preparing to "freeze" personnel, and the next step will be to warn their employes of a possible round of payless paydays.

NSRB: Chairman W. Stuart Symington yesterday called in his employes for a "pep" talk. He announced the appointment of two special assistants, Tom Lanphier and Steve Leo. Lanphier was a World War II ace who is head of the Air Force Association. He had been an Air Force consultant. Leo formerly headed Air Force's public relations under Symington.

GAO: Robert F. Keller has been appointed assistant to Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren. Charles E. Johnson was promoted to Keller's old job as legislative attorney. Keller succeeded W. L. Ellis, who is now chief of investigations at General Accounting.

LEAVE CRACKDOWN: One of the toughest tardy policies in Government is that of the Naval Receiving Station here.

All tardiness by civilians there must be reported. Employes are required to take an hour's annual leave on the spot when tardiness is not excused. Those who are tardy four times will be given letters of charges. In those cases where disciplinary action is taken, the employes will be placed on a six-month "reckoning period," whatever that is.

LEGISLATION: The House has passed and sent to the White House the bill to postpone the date for Selective Service jobs to be brought in under the Classification Act . . . It also okayed a bill to take Canal Zone postal employes out from under the same act . . . Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) is sponsoring a bill to provide a new building for the 5000 employes of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance in or near Baltimore. The employes are in inadequate quarters now

NOTES: At Treasury, John Boland is resigning to enter private law practice here. He's the assistant tax legislative counsel . . . A big-name law firm here is trying to hire several Internal Revenue lawyers at attractive salaries . . . Joseph T. Elvove, assistant chief of Agriculture's Sugar Branch, will quit for a better job in private industry. The Sugar Branch, incidentally appears to be an excellent springboard to big-time industry jobs . . . Dr. Deane B. Judd, chief of the Bureau of Standard's colorimetric work, has received the Commerce Department's exceptional service award for outstanding scientific accomplishment in his field . . . J. B. Gibbs, an agriculture expert on tobacco, will go to Paris for a year to study tobacco export problems.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce a test soon for actuaries to pay from $3825 to $6400 annually . . . Also coming up is a Nation-wide test for training specialists, $3725 to $7600, to fill vacancies in Public Health Service's communicable disease stations in 19 States . . . Civil Service has ordered the firing of nonstatus employes here in jobs of biologist, $3100 to $3825, and biological aid, $2200 to $3825 . . .

U. S. Parking Responsibility Here Stressed

The District and Federal Government were urged yesterday to take the initiative in solving Washington's critical downtown parking situation.

At the same time, Charles M. Upham, director of the D. C. Motor Vehicle Parking agency, lashed out at the apathy of businessmen toward the problem.

Despite the injury inflicted on the city's economy, not more than a dozen businessmen have shown they care about the problem, Upham said at a luncheon of the American Automobile Association's D. C. Advisory Board at the Mayflower Hotel.

The 200 new parking spaces a month that have become available in the past four years scarcely scratch the problem, Upham said. In that same period, there has been a 75,000 increase in the number of cars here.

Currently being considered, he said, are 21 projects to provide 8000 new spaces. Upham urged the District and Federal Government to make available land for parking projects.

Among District-owned land he suggested as possibilities, was the Western Market at 21st and K sts nw., where a proposal for a multi-story garage with market below is now in the hands of the Commissioners, he said.

But unless improvements are forthcoming within the year, drastic remedies will be necessary, Upham warned. He alluded here to the Baltimore plan, where the parking authority has been given five million dollars to lend for parking-project construction.

Berwyn Heights Chooses Board Of Commissioners

Three members of the Berwyn Heights, Md., Board of Town Commissioners were reelected yesterday, and two new men were chosen. The terms run for two years.

Reelected were Robert F. Burnette, George C. Hudgins and Than O. Porter. New commissioners are Ferrell S. Goldsborough and Edward Lucic.

The election was held at the Berwyn Heights Volunteer Fire Department.

$1,818,763 La Fontaine Cash Left in $2.25 Million Estate

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Jimmy LaFontaine, Mr. Big in Washington gambling circles for half a century, left an estate valued at more than $2,250,000—$1,818,763 in cash.

The petition for probate of the will, filed yesterday in District Court, listed $252,000 worth of real estate and $183,667 in stocks and bonds, in addition to the cash.

LaFontaine's estate was the most liquid in the memory of veteran court attaches.

John D. Rockefeller left only $451,364 in cash and $179,971 in property when he died in 1937.

LaFontaine died November 21 in Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore, at 81 of a cerebral hemorrhage.

The petition was filed by Charles E. Ford, trustee, executor and attorney for the estate, and a lifelong friend of LaFontaine.

Under the terms of the will, the widow, Mrs. Annie LaFontaine, 470 Maryland ave. sw., will receive the income from the estate, until her death, when the assets will be divided among 11 nieces and nephews.

Despite the size of the estate, the petition revealed that LaFontaine did not own the modest Maryland ave. home he shared with his wife for more than 45 years.

Nor did he own the fabulous Jimmy's Place, casino extraordinary where his name became synonymous with big-time gambling, just across the District Line on Bladensburg rd., the petition revealed.

Eleven and a half acres around the now tenantless casino were listed as assets, but Ford explained that the casino itself is in Mrs. LaFontaine's name.

Real estate holdings varied in size and value from a small District lot, assessed at $72, to more than 42 acres on Marlboro Pike, known as Maryland Club Gardens, valued at $62,215.

Debts were listed at $25,000, chiefly funeral and medical expenses.

The largest single cash deposit was $1,465,383.90 in the Lincoln National Bank. At the time of LaFontaine's death this money was in a small safe in his home. Ford carried the cash to the bank in two trips, protected by police machine guns.

PUC Auditor, Transit Official Disagree on Fare Schedules

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The hearing on the proposed Capital Transit Co. fare increases yesterday became an arena for two slide-rule experts who recommended differing fare schedules.

In the main, it was an all-day duel between J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of CTC, and V. A. McElfresh, executive accountant and auditor of the Public Utilities Commission.

Heberle favors the company proposal of 15 cents cash, tokens at 6 for 80 cents and elimination of the $1.75 weekly pass. McElfresh, even after the lengthy session, still stood behind a 15-cent cash fare, tokens at four for 50 cents and a $2.25 weekly pass.

The two major differences were over what McElfresh's formula would yield and what the firm's true operating expenses in the District are. The former involved a million-dollar difference and the latter threw $620,227 into controversy.

The PUC auditor testified he estimated his fare structure would yield net operating income of $1,849,692 a year and a 6.72 percent rate of return.

He anticipated a normal 5 percent decline in cash and token sales and 16 percent in pass sales. On top of this, the raised prices would cut another 20 percent into pass sales and 6.25 percent off cash and token revenues, he predicted.

Heberle, principal company witness, contested these figures, computing the net operating income from the McElfresh schedule as $868,907 a year and a 3.16 percent rate of return.

This was based on assumptions of a normal decline of 6 percent in all types of sales; an additional 50 percent reduction in pass sales because of the 50-cent a week boost; and a decline of 6 percent in the previous cash and token users plus the former pass buyers who become cash or token buyers.

The argument will resume today at 10 a. m. in the District Building before the Public Utilities Commission with Heberle facing cross-examination by Lloyd Harrison, PUC counsel, closely associated with McElfresh in supporting the latter's formula.

The second disagreement arose from McElfresh's determination of company expenses. Heberle charged that $251,926 of allocations placed by the auditor against company operations in Maryland and $368,301 of accounting adjustments were improper. These would cut about ¾ of 1 percent from the rate of return, Heberle noted.

In one respect, the two adversaries agreed. McElfresh declared that the company could not be maintained on a sound financial basis on a jurisdictional basis; that in order to continue furnishing service in D. C. and Maryland it had to achieve adequate collective returns.

Heberle said the firm now has a financial no-man's land with the Maryland Public Service Commission refusing to allow certain items in the rate base and some operating expenses and the PUC taking the same stand.

The D. C. branch, National Alliance of Postal Employes, filed a statement opposing any increase in fares and the Civil League of Brookmont, Md., and vicinity recommended that the Commission ask Congress to consider building a high-speed subway here.

A. L. Pierce, 507 3d st. se., an insurance salesman, proposed imposition of a charge for transfers rather than fare increases.

Exhibit Shows Collectors Hit By Forgeries

Forgeries and cases of mistaken identity in autographs came up for consideration at the National Society of Autograph Collectors' meeting at the Library of Congress yesterday.

In addition to a discussion, members of the society and the library also put on an exhibit of forgeries, a type of fraud that has plagued scholars and collectors as well as banks.

False signatures of George Washington, a skillfully faked Mozart manuscript, forged letters and signatures of Abraham Lincoln, Edgar Allan Poe, Noah Webster and Oscar Wilde are in the display.

One of the oddest examples is a printed bookplate alleged to have been used by Chief Pontiac. "Chief Pontiac owned a book, so ergo he must have had a bookplate," the caption says.

Another exhibit is a document with the handwritten names of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and others. A note on the document states: "From the 5th Sphere. G. Foster, Medium."

Dr. J. E. Fields, Joliet, Ill., physician and collector, in a talk on "mistaken identity," said people often are deceived by legitimate autograph material. As an example he pointed to Thomas Lynch. Lynch, sr., lived from 1726 to 1776 and was a member of the Old Congress and of the Stamp Act Congress. His son, Lynch, jr., lived from 1749 to 1779, and was a member of the Old Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence. Signatures of the son are worth up to $600, signatures of the father $45 to $60.

Richard M. Lederer, New York, was elected president of the society, which concluded its two-day meeting yesterday. He succeeds Fields.

Central Loses Fight To Keep Its Name

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Central High School yesterday lost the battle of school traditions.

Washington's oldest high school, which already had lost its building, was defeated in an effort to preserve its name.

The buildings and grounds committee of the Board of Education unanimously voted down a proposal that Central merge with Roosevelt to become the Roosevelt-Central High School.

The committee took the action after nine representatives of Roosevelt alumni, students and faculty told school board members that the proposed linking of the schools would destroy the "harmony, unity and esprit de corps" at Roosevelt.

Central Plan Rejected

Five Central spokesmen urged the committee to change the name of Roosevelt to preserve the name and traditions of Central.

The committee recommendation will be considered by the full board when it meets today at 3:30 p.m. at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts., nw. Support of the committee was considered likely.

The building at 13th and Clifton sts., nw., which has housed Central since 1916 was transferred by board action to a Negro school for students now attending the overcrowded Cardozo.

After the committee announced its decision, Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said he considered that Central was "dead" but that some provision will be made for the memorials, trophies and trust funds now belonging to Central.

Resentment Expressed

Spokesmen for Central expressed bitter resentment that Roosevelt had not welcomed the chance to combine with Central. They urged the board to reconsider its action transferring the Central building.

Mrs. Michael Troiano, president of the Central Parent-Teacher Association, suggested the board transfer Roosevelt instead.

"We will gladly take the name, traditions and trophies of Roosevelt," Mrs. Troiano said.

Mrs. Helen M. Porter, mother of three children at Central, said that students who would transfer to Roosevelt now feel "unwanted" and "are not interested in continuing in school."

John A. Reilly, former president of the Board of Trade, said of Roosevelt:

"I want to see that venerable institution preserved and not destroyed because of an expediency."

Miss May P. Bradshaw, former principal of Roosevelt, said there was no question that Central teachers and students would be welcome at Roosevelt. She said the school only objected to changing its name and character to accommodate Central.

D. C. Training School Head Cites Needs

A group of Washingtonians last night was invited to visit the District Training School at Laurel, Md., by Dr. Kenneth B. Jones, superintendent.

He promised to show the worst spots in the institution. He declared that in the 25 years of its existence, the school has not developed in either equipment, space or facilities, to the point where "it can do an adequate job for this large group of children."

Dr. Jones' invitation was extended to representatives of the District's seven Neighborhood Councils, meeting under auspices of United Community Services in annual session at Barker Hall of the YWCA.

The superintendent pointed out that all classes are conducted in basements, in rooms where the children cannot see daylight.

Dr. Jones warned that the school does not "begin to meet the urgent demand for admission of feebleminded children." He said only a small percentage of the feebleminded are admitted. Present school population is 685 "residents," he said.

They Listen

Va. Chamber Is Host to Congressmen

Members of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce last night turned the tables on the State's Congressional delegation at a dinner here.

Representatives of national affairs committees of local chambers did all the talking, while members of Congress listened.

The speakers were unanimous in their praise of the Virginia legislators' efforts to promote economy in Government, and of their opposition to many Administration measures.

Among the latter were named Federal aid to education, "socialized medicine," the Brannan Plan, public housing, and expansion of social security.

Announcement that Representative George A. Smathers was leading Senator Claude E. Pepper in the Florida senatorial race brought the loudest applause of the evening.

Two members of congressional delegation were absent—Senator Harry F. Byrd and Representative Thomas Stanley.

Speakers included Henry W. Anderson, jr., Alexandria; H. W. Page, Bristol; F. V. Riddick, Charlottesville; Hosea Wilson, Danville; E. H. Cann, Fredericksburg; Henry C. Durrschmidt, Marion; Frank Mantz, Portsmouth; W. S. Harney, Norfolk; Warren R. Pollard, Richmond; Edward H. Ould, Roanoke; John B. Doffin, Staunton, and William A. Battaile, Winchester.

Montgomery Council Signs For School Aid

The Montgomery County council yesterday signed agreements that will clear the way for obtaining $584,000 in State aid for county school construction.

One agreement provided for an outright grant by the State of $242,000, to match $1 to each $3 expended by the county. It is for construction of Somerset, Oak View, Viers Mill Village, East-West Highway, East Rockville, Homewood, Alta Vista, Rolling Terrace and Glenmont Elementary Schools, for which the county has expended $726,000.

The second agreement provides for a State loan of $342,000 for schools which the county will pay back. The two agreements represent first installment of the $1,231,125 in grants the county expects to receive from the State. The county also applied for loans of $3,855,000 of which it already has received $1,330,000.

The council appointed two new inspectors for the department of public works as a measure to meet the criticism that inspection has not been as good as it should have been, President Frederic P. Lee said. Lee said contractors have complained that that the inspection has not been worth the fees they have charged.

The new appointees are: James A. Buchanan, 4th, of Rockville, to receive $3300 a year, and William B. McKinney of Silver Spring, to receive $2860 a year. Both appointments are effective May 8.

The council deferred action on a request from State Director of Public Welfare J. Milton Patterson that names be suggested for successors to Adolph E. Gude and G. Gregg Everngam, whose terms as members of the Montgomery County welfare board expire May 31. They are not permitted to succeed themselves under the State law. The council also will name a successor to Dr. Lewis Meriam as the council representative on the board. Dr. Meriam resigned recently.

The council denied three zoning petitions and granted a fourth, and set hearings on four front-foot benefit projects for next month.

Nurses will exchange their double-breasted uniforms for single-breasted ones likes the Waves wear.

Rockets Prove Earth Blanket Of Electricity

High-altitude rockets have verified the scientific theory that the earth is blanketed by a layer of flowing electric charges, scientists were told here yesterday.

The proof was offered by Elwood Maple, physicist at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md., in a report on terrestrial magnetism, at the annual meetings of the American Geophysical Union.

The fluid blanket of electricity, its currents flowing like ocean tides, was verified by instruments within Aerobee rockets that were launchd from shipboard, Maple reported.

The electric layer, long accepted in scientific theory, is said to account for the variations in strength of radio communication. Its motion is held responsible for the continuous changes in the earth's magnetic field.

More importantly in the field of guided missile research, it is a factor to be reckoned with in the development of pilotless missiles largely operated by devices which might be influenced in passage in the electric fields, physicists said.

Maple said the experimental rockets, developed through the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Silver Spring, placed the layer at 66 miles above the earth.

Air Force Seeks Missing Fighter In New Mexico

Air Force officials are searching for an Andrews Air Force Base F-51 fighter plane lost somewhere over New Mexico since Thursday, it was learned last night.

Andrews officers identified the missing pilot from clearance forms as First Lieut. Robert J. Stafford of the 136th Air National Guard Fighter Squadron at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Air Guard sources said Lieutenant Stafford was assigned to temporary duty in the National Guard Bureau at the Pentagon. He took off Thursday for Scott Field, Ill., went from there to Denver, Colo., and was heading for Las Vegas on a night flight when he disappeared.

J. H. Moore, Philadelphia Ex-Mayor, Dies

Philadelphia, May 2 (AP).—J. Hampton Moore, 86, two-term Mayor of Philadelphia and a Congressman for seven terms, died today at his home after a two-year illness.

With him when he died were his wife, the former Adelaide Stone, and two of the five survivors among their children, Mrs. Julia Eisley, and a son, Harvey.

Mr. Moore served as a Congressman from 1905 through 1919. He was elected as a Republican from the Third Pennsylvania District. He focused his congressional activities on the improvement and maintenance of existing waterways and the maintenance of new ones along the Atlantic Coast.

Mr. Moore was one of the few persons to serve as Mayor of Philadelphia more than once. His first term was as an independent. He was elected in opposition to a candidate set up by the perennially strong Philadelphia Republican organization.

His administration was stormy from the start because of continual conflict with city council. It is believed that Mayor Moore in his first term—1920-1924—vetoed more bills of council and saw them repassed over his veto than any recent mayor.

Mr. Moore came back into the mayoralty arena in 1931 as the avowed choice of the Republican organization he had fought so bitterly 12 years before. With this support, he won the nomination and the election with ease.

Mr. Moore was born in Woodbury, N. J., March 8, 1864, and spent 13 years as a reporter for the Public Ledger, covering general assignments but specializing in labor conditions.

"Wrong Measure of Greatness"

Scorns Trillion-Dollar Income

DOROTHY THOMPSON declared yesterday that there is something wrong with the state of the union although our economic position is sound. Referring to President Truman's prediction of a trillion-dollar national income by the year 2000, she suggested that the "concept of a trillion-dollar income as any measure of greatness is precisely what is wrong with us."

Speaking before an audience of wives of delegates to the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the National Chamber of Commerce, and wives of several top Government officials including Mrs. Truman, Miss Thompson said that the material concept of greatness is leading us to the "mass man" and that the mass man falls easy prey to ideologies like Communism and Naziism.

"I am not worried about communism as such in America," she said, "I am worried about the progressive decay of standards in this country—intellectual and moral. . . . No great civilization was ever brought down by an external enemy. Always they have disintegrated from their own follies, passions, lack of intelligence and lack of self-restraint."

The internationally known columnist concluded hopefully with the belief that America will undergo "a renaissance and conversion" and that the world "will follow us in this revolution of civilization and humanity."

She spoke at length about the signs and symptoms which led her to feel that we now measure progress in terms of "motor cars . . . atom bombs, heads of cattle . . . nylons, ice cream and candy bars."

Since we produce and consume more of these things . . . than all of the rest of the world combined . . . we all ought to be happy," she said, but pointed out that "we obviously are not. Our divorce rate is approaching that of the marriage rate . . . We have the best-fed and most criminal youth in the history of any so-called civilized people. We have an appalling rate of alcoholism, psychiatric disorders and outright lunacy."

It is up to industry, as well as churches and schools and homes, to see to it that America gets back on the path of educating the human being, instead of making a conforming "mass man" of him, Miss Thompson said.

As it is now, we do not see the difference between a Communist and someone who wants to improve the paper towel situation in the washroom, she said. "We consider them both radicals."

In constructing the perfect machine man to produce large quantities of goods, we have reduced man to zero, Miss Thompson declared.

Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke briefly following Miss Thompson, applauding her talk and saying that when women make up their minds something should be done, they usually get it done.

Among the guests at the head table with Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Steinkraus, who presided, were Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Mrs. J. Howard McGrath, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Jesse Donaldson and Mrs. Louis Johnson. Following the luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, the delegates' wives were entertained at tea at the Brazilian Embassy where Miss Carolina Nabuco, sister of the Ambassador, was hostess.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Hunting Way Out of Neurotic Difficulties, Woman Undertook Analysis, But Her Worship of Doctor Blocked Treatment; Where to Next?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I lost my mother through divorce at an early age, and my feelings for my father grew more and more towards fear and hate through the years, not without good reason. As long as I can remember, I have loved and trusted nobody. I seldom, if ever, form a close friendship. I have never been in love, except in a few instances when I have become emotionally dependent on some one, in a jealous, possessive, insatiable way.

Until a few years ago these love-objects always were women, older than myself, mother-substitutes. The situation would end through my finding a new object or through rejection from them. In periods when I had no such attachment I felt emotionally dead, depressed and listless; but in the periods of dependency I suffered from great anxiety that several times led to attempted suicide and/or hospital confinement.

A few years ago I turned to analysis and the pattern repeated itself more or less, although this time the object was a man, the analyst. The treatment lasted approximately 18 months, with two or three interviews a week, and in that time he was in my thoughts every waking hour. My emotions were a mixture of love and hate, of trust and distrust, of hope and despair; but always there was extreme dependency and strong anxiety.

How Start Flow of Self Reliance?

FINALLY this situation, too, ended in rejection. The analyst informed me that he deemed it unwise that he continue, and said I should try to get a new analyst. He gave no reason, but another doctor explained that my relationship to the analyst had become the most important thing in my life, thereby making it impossible to work successfully on my difficulties. Although later I begged the analyst to resume treatments, he refused. I have not seen him for more than a year, but still I think of him every day.

I realize that I do not know him, do not love him, that it is not him as a person I am thinking of, but that he represents something to me that I cannot give up. However, that's not the whole problem. Evidently not all my difficulties would be solved by giving up this particular dependency. The deep problem is not only to give up, but to be able to put something there instead; to be able to enter into non-dependent mutual friendships and mature love relationship. Never have I doubted more my ability to do so.

Please do not dismiss this letter as something for psychoanalysis to clear up. The analysts seldom explain, seldom answer questions, and my experience doesn't encourage me to seek answers there. Maybe you can think of something to open my eyes. I am considered intelligent, but when it comes to understanding myself I seem to be stumbling in the dark. S. C.

Asks Too Much Help of Others

DEAR S. C.: What is it the analyst represents that you can't give up? Let's deal with that question a bit. He symbolized intimate contact with an understanding heart, something undertaken but not quite achieved. He really tried to know you, to comprehend the nature of your wretchedness, with intent to guide you out of irrational fears. You defeated his effors by trying to "possess" his, as the supposed cure-all of your woes. So he withdrew from the situation; but your dream of escaping from yourself through identification with him lingers on.

In the therapeutic relationship while it lasted, the analyst could be likened to a lifeguard trying to fetch in a poor swimmer lost in a storm-tossed sea, while having to fight the swimmer's panic, which mostly kept both under water and finally retiring from the futile struggle. Possibly a genius analyst might have steered you to rational cooperation; but I rather believe your suffocating dependency of that time would have routed even a genius.

Pray for Inflow of Creative Power

NOBODY can help the person who demands full help from outside himself. The potentials of health or healing, of greatness or riches or wisdom, of joyous love and buoyant friendship, are within oneself. They are nowhere else.

The most another can do for you is to help spark ideas on how to use your own latent powers of healthy growth. You've got to do the work and go through the brave lonely travail of getting consciously reborn to sanity. This requires that you practice self reliance even when you're terrified.

Until now you've been trying to tap others' supply of the life force, thus making yourself an intolerable thorn in the side of each love-object, which has brought on rejection as well as a true sense of personal peril in behaving so non-self-helpfully. When you must have direct access to strength greater than your current personal supply, use prayer—which invokes light and power within the self that weren't manifest before one prayed. For help in stimulating your creative faith, read Agnes Sanford's thriller, "The Healing Light," published by Macalaster Park Publications, St. Paul, Minn.

Overweight Makes You Look Years Older

By Ida Jean Kain

OVERWEIGHT is the big problem in middle age . . . and it's no help to keeping young. Ten or twelve added pounds can crowd you into a whole size larger—from a 16 to an 18 and on to matronly sizes.

However, it's not only because you look older with excess weight that you feel older. Extra pounds strain all the vital organs, and that is the real reason fat is aging. Think of the added pounds as extra, and a burden which you must carry constantly.

This may be a bit difficult, for after all, the pounds seem so much part of your person, particularly when they come on gradually. It's easy to take the comfortable view that it's natural to gain at your age, and that the body adjusts to the extra weight.

But the body does not adjust! As weight increases, bones and framework do not grow stronger to support the extra weight, and vital organs do not get more efficient. Excess pounds handicap the whole body.

Normal Weight Keeps You Young

BUILT to carry say 145 pounds, will the internal machinery last as long or work as smoothly burdened with 25 or more extra pounds? The answer is definitely no. It has been estimated that just 10 excess pounds add a half-mile of additional blood vessels through which the heart must pump the blood. No wonder a considerable amount of excess weight is aging and shortens life. Normal weight at 25 is healthiest and youngest from then on.

But if it's not normal and it is dangerous to take on pounds, why is it so common in middle age, you may query. And why do folks tend to pile on pounds even if they eat no more than formerly? It's like this . . . Around 40 there is a gradual slowing down of all body processes—perhaps that's nature's way of lessening wear and tear. At any rate, calories are not converted into energy at the same brisk pace. Then, too, the average person slows down physically and takes things easier. So when activity is lessened and nature slows down, obviously less food is required.

Nature Can't Control Habit

THEN why doesn't nature cut appetite to fit the lessened requirements? Nature can't control habit, and appetite is largely habit. Interest in assorted sweets and hot buttered biscuits doesn't automatically lessen. In fact, sweets, starches and fats add up to the dietary excesses in middle age.

Lily Pons, famed Met soprano, keeps fit for her strenuous job by sensible eating. That's why, at the peak of her fame, she's still as slim as a debutante.

Not only is keeping weight down important to health—how you do it is important to keeping young. The overweight, even while reducing, requires the same protective materials, so none of the essential foods can be safely cut. And that brings us back to sweets, starches and fats—they are the foods to cut down on.

So in eating to beat the pounds, go by the excellent rule "Eat what you should first," and stay within 1150 calories a day.

Geographers to Mark Jubilee

The twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Society of Woman Geographers will bring distinguished women from many cities to Washington next Saturday. There will be women who have climbed mountains, women whose work is on the ocean floor, women whose favorite occupation is digging in the earth to uncover jewels and pottery of past centuries, and women whose love of exploration has taken them into many unknown corners.

Twenty-five years ago, the four widely traveled founders of the society sat at a tea table exchanging accounts of adventures and future plans. It is from that little group that the society came into being. For a quarter of a century it has provided a medium of contact between hundreds of women in some 80 cities of the United States and in 45 foreign countries.

To Present Medal

Presentation of the Gold Medal of the society, which has been awarded on only three previous occasions, will be the main feature of the anniversary dinner on Saturday night in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel. The name of the recipient of the medal will be announced at that time.

Former members honored for their original contributions to geographic knowledge have been Amelia Earhart, for her solo flight across the Atlantic; Margaret Mead, for her anthropological researches in the South Sea Islands; and Blair Niles, for her explorations in and writing about little-known regions of Borneo, Upper Burma and South America.

Marie Peary Stafford, born nearer the North Pole than any other white child, who is now president of the society, will preside at the dinner.

Tables Turned: Mrs. Mesta Now D. C.'s No. 1 Guest

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

A PARTY filled day for Mrs. Perle Mesta, home from her post as United States Minister to Luxembourg, was topped by President and Mrs. Truman's dinner last night at Blair House.

Earlier yesterday, Vice President and Mrs. Barkley entertained for Mme. Minister at a cocktail party for a small group of her official and nonofficial friends.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson were at both parties. Others at the dinner were Miss Margaret Truman, who came down from New York for the occasion; the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonet; the Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn and his sister, Mrs. W. A. Thomas; Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed; Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James E. Webb. Then there were Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, retiring Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Whitney, and White House Aides Lieut. Col. Robert F. Scott and Lieut. Hove B. Moore.

Breakfast, Lunch For Mrs. Truman

MRS. TRUMAN, guest of honor at the annual Congressional Club 11:30 a.m. breakfast held at the Shoreham yesterday, was also honor guest at the Chamber of Commerce wives' luncheon at 1:30 p.m. at the Mayflower.

Congressional Club members and their guests—there must have been 300 or more—sat down at small tables decorated with flower-edged shelf-paper fans and red and white carnations as the centerpieces. The fans, Mrs. James C. Davis, chairman of decorations explained, were used because "we're all Mrs. Truman's fans."

Flowers and feathers bobbed in a row on hats at the head table. Mrs. Truman's blue silk suit was topped by a little round blue sailor banded in red. Mrs. Ralph Church, president of the club, who introduced the special guests, wore all black. Going down the line there were Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, with navy and beige wings on her dark blue hat; Mrs. Max Truitt wearing a white cloche, and Mrs. Tom Clark with a soft white feather pompom on her black hat.

The club's president took recognition of the fact that this was the 42d annual breakfast honoring the President's wife, and proudly introduced the club's fifth president, Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, widow of Senator Pomerene, who had come from her home in Ohio for the event. Other former presidents present were Mrs. Porter Dale, Mrs. Clifford Davis, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Mrs. Clarence C. Dill and Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer.

Others at the head table were Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. William O. Douglas and Mrs. Harold Burton, all Supreme Court Justice's wives; Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. Oscar Chapman in black with red ribbons on her sailor hat; Mrs. Charles F. Brannan wearing a mauve hat with matching roses; Mrs. Jesse Donaldson and Mrs. J. Howard McGrath.

From her place at the honor guest table, Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Representative from Connecticut, watched her brother, the famous pianist, Mario Braggiotti, give a program after luncheon.

High spot of Mr. Braggiotti's masterful playing, which included Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue and a Chopin Polonaise and Nocturne, was the pianist's arrangement of Yankee Doodle as Scarlatti, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy and Gershwin might have played it.

Board Members At Honor Table

BOARD MEMBERS at the honor table were Mrs. Sheridan Downey, Mrs. Hal C. Holmes, Mrs. Lawrence B. Hays, Mrs. Carl T. Curtis, Mrs. Paul Kilday and Mrs. Lawrence Smith.

Having a hand in the success of the fete were Mrs. James Davis' assistants, Mrs. John C. Stennis, Mrs. Prince Preston, Mrs. Joseph Bryson, Mrs. William R. Poage, Mrs. Carl Mundt, Mrs. Paul C. Jones, Mrs. Frank A. Barrett and Mrs. Hugh Peterson.

Mrs. Harold Burton was in charge of hostesses; Mrs. Paul Kilday, for music, which was furnished by the Marine Band. Mrs. Robert Hale handled publicity and Mrs. Carroll Kearns, general chairman of special events at the Congressional Club, was assisted by Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. John W. Bricker, Mrs. Clifford Davis and Mrs. Clark W. Thompson.

Seated around the room, I saw: Mrs. Lyndon Johnson and Mrs. Albert Thomas at a Texas table; Mrs. Perle Mesta, our Minister to Luxembourg, who was the guest of Mrs. Ken Regan; Georgia Lusk, former Congresswoman, now the one woman member of the War Claims Commission; Mrs. Max Gardner and Mrs. Charles Dewey at the same table. Mrs. Harold Mosier wore a big black hat trimmed with white flowers; Mrs. Morris Cafritz had a spray of white apple blossoms and a big yellow apple on her yellow heat. Others present were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle and Mrs. William P. MacCraken.

MRS. TRUMAN and Mario Braggiotti exchange greetings at the Congressional Club brunch held yesterday in honor of the First Lady. Mrs. Ralph Church, president of the club, is at the right. Mr. Braggiotti, composer pianist, offered a program of piano music at the brunch, which was held at the Shoreham Hotel. He is the brother of Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Representative from Connecticut

Another engagement on Mario Braggiotti's book yesterday was the tea given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney for the National Society of Arts and Letters. The tea followed the regular monthly meeting of the society, which was held at the home of Mrs. Whitney.

Miss Sunny Sturdevant, pianist, and Miss Barbara Rogers, vocalist, blended their talents in a program of music which followed Mr. Braggiotti's performance. Both girls are seniors this year at Holton Arms, and are winners of scholarships of the society of Arts and Letters.

Alexandria Historian Opens Home to Garden Tourists

By Ellen Buell Parry

IT IS quite fitting that the house of Gay Montague Moore be one of the Alexandria homes open to garden tourists this Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Moore is the author of "George Washington's Alexandria," published last fall. This book, written to commemorate Alexandria's 200th anniversary, contains a wealth of information about the town and the people who have lived there.

Mrs. Moore's house, located at 207 Prince st., was built by William Fairfax about 1752, and was bought and restored by the historian and her husband, Col. Charles Beatty Moore, 21 years ago.

Since that time Mrs. Moore has spent more of her time studying and writing about Alexandria. She expects to bring out another book containing additional material she has gathered about this interesting Virginia city.

Mrs. Moore is a sister of Brig. Gen. Robert L. Montague, USMC (retired), now director of Gunston Hall, George Mason's historic home. Andrew Jackson Montague, a former Jimmie has gone in for amateur theatricals, joining the Roosevelt Masquers. He played three bit parts in Sinclair Lewis's "Dodsworth," put on by that group last Friday evening at the Roosevelt Auditorium.

After the play, the Parks entertained the cast and a few friends at a supper dance at their apartment.

In between buying, selling and remodeling houses, he has squeezed 16 trips to Europe.

LADIES of the Philippines gather handicrafts for the charity bazaar to be held at the Philippine Embassy on Saturday, May 6, from 10 a. m. to 7 p. m. Mrs. Jose Teodoro, jr., (left) is president of the Association of Philippine-American Women of Washington. Mrs. Carlos P. Romulo (center), wife of the president of U. N. Took Her 15 Months to Kiss Her Explorer-Spouse Goodby.

"Jackie" Ronne took a two-week leave from her State Department job a couple of years back to see her explorer-husband off on his Antartic expedition. And she has not been back to the office since.

In early January, 1947, she packed a "dressy" dress, a good-looking suit, some nylons and high-heels and flew down to Beaumont, Tex., to kiss her husband, Comdr. Finn Ronne, USNR, goodbye. Then, at the last minute, Jackie climbed on board with him.

That's how Mrs. Ronne became one of the first two women to set foot on the Antartic continent. Tall, vivacious Mrs. Ronne recounted her experiences on this trip at the Washington club meeting yesterday at the clubhouse.

During the 15-month trip Mrs. Ronne kept the expedition records and even ran the seismological station for a while. It was an exciting trip, Mrs. Ronne told the clubwomen, but she isn't especially anxious to do it again.

In the first place the monotonous diet of filet mignon and canned vegetables dulled her appetite. She lost 20 pounds.

Then, too, personal relations grew extremely strained after months of isolated living. "It got so bad that you'd become terribly irritated just by the way your neighbor tied his shoes."

The expedition proved highly successful, however. Commander Ronne proved that an entire continent covers the South Pole—that is not divided by a strait as some explorers had believed.

Ask Anne

Don't Let Baby be a Wet Blanket On That Summer Trip; Here's How To Keep Young Nomads Happy

WITH National Baby Week now in progress (April 29 to May 6) these questions from Mrs. P.Y. are particularly appropriate:

DEAR ANNE:

Have you or your readers any suggestions for taking a 16-month-old child on a long auto trip? Information on naps, feedings, play, etc., would be helpful.

Mrs. P. Y., Washington.

Here are a few suggestions for traveling with your youngster. I'm hoping other readers will send in still more, as the time of the year for summer trips is fast approaching.

Having a car bed or its equivalent for the baby's nap is, of course, important. One idea is this: Place luggage needed only occasionally on the floor between the front and back seats. On top of it, place a crib mattress or several layers of blankets, making a level space of the entire area back of the front seat.

Over this, a plastic playpen cover or any dark, washable cover could be placed. With this arrangement, the youngster will have ample space to move about and play without tumbling off the seat, or to lie down comfortably and take a nap.

A car chair so the baby can sit up front with you at times and look out of the window will also be greatly enjoyed. If you haven't one made for this purpose, any child's chair or hassock that can be comfortably placed on the seat and won't tip too easily will do.

Thermos bottles of orange juice, milk, and water (sterilized, if your youngster has a sensitive tummy) will add to his well-being. You can prepare these, as well as other food, if you make overnight stops at tourist cottages, a boon to mothers traveling with young children. Take along crackers and cookies for mid-morning or afternoon snacks—or when delayed past mealtime on the road.

As to toys, let the baby take a favorite one from home—a beloved teddy bear, for instance, that will make him feel less strange in new surroundings. Beside this, assemble in advance a box of surprises, giving him one each day to add to his pleasure. Bring these out at mid-morning or afternoon, when things are getting dull. Extra ones can be purchased along the way to add to your store.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how I can block needlepoint or where I can have this done?

W. J. L., Arlington.

This isn't a hard task to accomplish at home. A board the right size (is there a breadboard in your home?) plus some rustproof tacks and you're all set to go.

Dampen the back of the needlepoint until canvas and wool are quite wet. Roll in a bath towel and let stand until the piece is uniformly damp. Next stretch it out face down on the board, pulling it into the proper shape. Thumbtack in place, putting the tacks no more than ¾-inch apart.

Leave needlepoint on board until thoroughly dry—maybe several days. Pressing afterward isn't really necessary, but if you'd like to do it, place the piece wrong side up on a heavily padded board. Cover with heavy wet cloth and press with hot iron. Do not iron entirely dry or press hard.

DEAR ANNE:

My white kid gloves were put in a box with a pair of black kid gloves. Now my white ones are soiled by the black ones. Is there any way I can remove these spots from the white kid? The cleaners don't care about cleaning them. Betty.

It would be safest to leave this job to a professional, and there are a few firms here that clean gloves. One can be reached by telephoning DIstrict 3240. If the spots are dye, experts there can tell you whether or not they can take them out.

Lawyers Battle Over Marital Affairs Counsel, Postpone Vote on Bar Association Proposal

Washington lawyers yesterday battled in debate over a Bar Association proposal to set up a District Court marital affairs counsel, but postponed a vote until May 9.

A sudden motion for adjournment was adopted overwhelmingly after H. Mason Welch strongly attacked the proposal, and argued that members of the bar had not had time to study it.

The plan, similar to the "Friend of Court" procedure used in Detroit, would established a marital affairs counsel and staff with broad powers in divorce cases.

Supported by Tamm

The program is outlined and supported in the current District of Columbia Bar Association Journal by Judge Edward A. Tamm of the District Court.

Arthur J. Hilland, who dissented from an 8-1 majority report of a committee studying the plan, decried what he called the "unlawyer-like" presentation of the proposal.

"The majority report stands wholly unsupported by any proof of need of this sweeping and expensive proposal," he declared.

Children's Custody

John J. Carmody answered that the idea of giving the counsel's staff investigative authority to provide evidence "fixes with a great degree of accuracy the most important right of all—the care and custody of children in divorce cases."

He opposed the recommendation of the report that a separate Domestic Relations division of District Court be established for divorce proceedings.

With "appointments what they are today," Carmody declared, "it is conceivable that we may get some cantankerous old bachelor—and I said bachelor—or some cantankerous old maid, and we'd be stuck with her the rest of our life."

In Hilland's Defense

Welch came to the defense of Hilland in opposition to the report. Welch said Judge Tamm's recommendation that a marital affairs counsel be set up "by statute or rule of court" is objectionable.

If done by statute, the office would be "just another octopus, political and arrogant," he said. If by rule, it would mean "abdication of the strength and power of the judicial system.

"A ridiculous and unthinkable situation is proposed to us, one which would weaken the position and prestige of the courts," he said.

Welch particularly attacked the proposed official's authority to investigate financial and personal affairs of litigants, charging it would create "a U. S. District Court branch of the FBI."

They certainly are, Petunia—because they not only absorb the grease from chops, bacon, etcetera . . . but you can place the whole thing in a warm oven and keep them hot till ready to serve.

Search Party Rescues Lost Area Women

Pearisburg, Va., May 2 (Spl.).—A Washington woman and a girl from Herndon, Va., were found by a 100-man search party early today after the two had wandered through a wooded section near here for 10 hours.

Mrs. Rayburn Miller, 28, wife of the manager of the Washington Hotel in Washington, and Miss Edith Snider, 19, of Herndon, were uninjured except for scratches and shock.

Miller said the two women started out on their hike about 2 p. m. yesterday.

The women were located a few minutes after midnight, 6 miles from the hotel.

Trail markers, set up by the hotel for their guests, weren't in place yet for the season when the women started out, Miller explained.

Home Economy

As long as I remember now . . . My wife has preached to me . . . About the value and the good . . . Of home economy . . . Not just to clear the mortgage on . . . The house we want to own . . . But also to be frugal with . . . The light and telephone . . . To pay insurance premiums and . . . To hold our spending down . . . On food and clothes and furniture . . . And happy times in town . . . And many are the times that I . . . Have found it quite a strain . . . And I have been inclined to sigh . . . Or murmur and complain . . . But as I watch our progress I . . . Am grateful as can be . . . To her whose wifely wisdom is . . . Our best security.

Papageorge Will Continue County Work

George T. Papageorge, director of public works, and County Manager Irving G. McNayr of Montgomery County, Md., have "resolved their differences," and Papageorge will continue in his job.

Papageorge, one of the three top-salaried men of the county, announced that he planned resigning May 1 after he and County Manager McNayr had a disagreement April 21.

The public works director confered with the county manager yesterday afternoon. Then he went into the hall of the courthouse at Rockville and announced to the press that he would not resign as scheduled.

"The differences between McNayr and myself have been resolved," Papageorge said, "and I have withdrawn my resignation."

McNayr confirmed the reconciliation.

"I felt that the work was not being handled as rapidly as it should," McNayr said," but Papageorge had a logical approach that he should build up his organization first and then get to work," McNayr said. The two ideas have been compromised and a little of each will be acopted, he explained.

Both denied that J. O. Harvey, chief of the division of equipment, maintenance and construction, who is one of the oldest employes in time of service in the county, had anything to do with the resignation. Papageorge was quoted as saying that he could not agree with Harvey on the removal of the division depot from Gaithersburg to Rockville. Papageorge said Harvey and the depot will remain at Gaithersburg.

The director of public works post pays $9500 a year and has been held by Papageorge since July.

New Principal Gets Approval In Fairfax

The Fairfax County School Board yesterday asked Franconia parents to iron out their differences over the merits of Mrs. Virginia Andrews, principal of the Franconia School.

After receiving petitions from two groups, one of which asked Mrs. Andrews' removal, the board voted to confirm her earlier reappointment to the principal's post for the fall term.

Through Acting Chairman Alex Haight, the board suggested to the delegation that they "go back to their homes and make further effort to work out the problems" that have arisen over the dissatisfaction of some parents with the principal's administration.

Fairfax Seeks School Bond Referendum

Fairfax County's "on again-off again" referendum on a proposed $10,500,000 bond issue for school construction was "on" again yesterday.

The county school board, for the second time in two and a half months, approved a resolution petitioning Judge Paul E. Brown, of the Circuit Court, to order a referendum on the emergency construction fund.

A similar resolution, approved in February, was withdrawn after attorneys had expressed the belief legality of the referendum might be periled by a pending Falls Church annexation suit against the county. However, school officials said they were advised to proceed after a three-judge annexation court agreed two weeks ago it would not raise any questions concerning validity of bonds which might be floated during the period of litigation.

Members of the board said the request probably will be submitted to Judge Brown before the end of this week. Under State law, it is mandatory that he act on the petition, and that the referendum date be set for a period not to exceed 20 days after the order is issued.

The bond issue, on which all county voters are qualified to vote, is planned to provide an extensive program of school construction deemed necessary to meet school needs expectd by 1951.

Man Is Acquitted In Fatal Stabbing

Robert W. Dorsey, 22, of 1106 3d st. sw., was acquitted yesterday by a District Court jury of a first-degree murder charge in the fatal stabbing of his estranged wife, Yvonne, 20, on December 7.

Dorsey, accused of stabbing the woman, who was the mother of his 1-year-old child, eight times, pleaded temporary insanity induced by liquor. He was represented by Attorneys Timothy Edward O'Connell and Thomas A. Flannery.

The jury deliberated 26 hours before bringing in the verdict. The trial was before Judge James R. Kirkland.

Prob'ly afraid he will pull his advertising.

Are Women More Honest Than Men?

Many Reasons Found for Embezzlement

This is the third of a series about the weird and the typical cases of embezzlement.

By Kenneth L. Hall

CHAPTER THREE

Are women basically more honest than men? That question will never be answered to the satisfaction of both sexes.

Men and women embezzle money for basically different reasons. Consider the Case of the Lady with the Furs.

Single, 31 years old, she was employed for 10 years as cashier for a firm in Oregon.

In spite of her modest salary she dressed well, was particularly fond of furs, owned a car, rented an expensive apartment.

The young lady's generosity was her undoing. When a fellow employe got in a jam over gambling debts, she lent him a thousand dollars. The gesture was appreciated by everyone except the fellow's wife.

Spouselike, the wife decided her husband must be on unduly intimate terms with a gal who would cheerfully chip in $1000 to get him off the bookie's hook.

The wife talked. The firm heard the gossip. It checked the cashier's books. There was a "discrepancy" of $23,735.57.

The young lady with the big heart heart and the big bankroll ended up in the Big House, a victim of her own extravagance and misplaced generosity.

Case of Mr. X

The Case of Mr. X is more typical of the male approach to embezzling.

Mr. X was employed for 12 years by a large manufacturing concern in upper New York State. He was 40 years old, married, father of an 8-year-old girl.

An active member of several lodges, he was also a churchgoer and an all-round model of propriety. He was trusted implicitly by his company's officers with whom he mingled on an equal social, if not financial, footing.

And then he lost his footing.

An audit revealed that Mr. X was embarrassingly short $10,304.75 in his books.

His reaction to the news was frank and typical of the male embezzler.

He admitted that he had "borrowed" the money in order to maintain his family on the social level to which he wanted them to become accustomed.

He denied indignantly that he was a thief. Given the time, he said, he would have replaced every penny. He was given the time—and is still doing it in State prison.

"Table of Motives"

The desire to "keep up with the Joneses" is one of the strongest motives for dishonesty.

It is so well recognized that bonding companies sometimes refuse to insure a low-salaried employe until he is given an increase in salary that would presumably place him beyond temptation.

Let's take a look at the "table of motives" compiled by a large bonding company. It is a revealing comparison of the reasons why "honest" men and women become embezzlers:

Men
Gambling and/or drink	17.6%
Extravagant living	16.7
Accumulation of debts	16.2
Bad business managers	13.8
Desire to impress women	10.6
Speculation in stocks	8.7
Miscellaneous	16.4
Total	100%

Women
Living above means	34 %
Accumulation of debts	28.8
Dependents	10.6
Mentally irresponsible	7.9
Sickness in family	5.3
Desire to impress men	5.3
Gambling	5.3
Miscellaneous	2.8
Total	100%

There was the unusual case of Widow X, an attractive matron of 45, who was employed 12 years by a finance company in Nevada.

Widow X lived a quiet, simple life and apparently spent little money on herself. Her friends were "nice" people who smiled at her tendency to be over-religious. They didn't think it particularly strange when she joined a cult of the kind which seems to flourish in the wide open spaces of the West.

One day the auditors said the records of Widow X showed a shortage of $13,742.75.

Her friends and employer were aghast. This sweet, quiet, religious little lady an embezzler? Incredible! And then the truth came out.

Widow X had stolen steadily several years to help finance the fervent fellow who was leader of the cult to which she belonged.

When caught, she showed little remorse. She called the charmer her "apostle of truth" who had heard the call from above. It later turned out that her apostle had heard the call, all right, but it was the siren call of another woman in California on whom he had spent most of the stolen money.

If there is one element all embezzlers seem to have in common, it is hard luck.

If money was taken for playing the ponies, the bangtails begin to run out of the money.

If stocks were bought with a get-rich-quick scheme in mind, the market takes a bad turn.

If the money was taken to help smooth over domestic troubles, the troubles became more complex—and expensive—than ever.

Yet hard luck and real or fancied money needs are not the whole story of employe dishonesty.

Sociologists say there is a weakness of character in most embezzlers that prevents them from resisting the pressures of everyday living.

Look through the table of motives. You'll see they are made up of ordinary temptations which most people successfully overcome.

However disapprovingly we view them, we must recognize embezzlers as people who have failed to cope with ordinary hazards of life.

Few, if any, have a valid excuse for their acts.

An official of the National Surety Co., who has come in contact with 200,000 embezzlement cases during a long career, says: "I would have difficulty in recalling more than 20 cases which dire necessity was actually the cause for the dishonesty."

The statement is a damaging one and raises a leading question. Are most people basically honest? Or does the germ of dishonesty lie latent within all of us, awaiting only one moment of weakness to break out in virulent form?

GOP 'Grass Roots' Appeal Urged on Party by Chief

Guy George Gabrielson, chairman of the National Republican Committee, yesterday called for reactivation of the GOP at the precinct level.

He spoke to about 25 men and women attending the Republican school for politics at the Mayflower. The party workers, who hail from 11 States and the District, will go back home to teach th election-winning techniques to workers on the local front.

The Republicans, Gabrielson said, have been weak since 1932 in their appeals for the votes of young people, minority groups, and labor.

Today the three-day school will end when the students receive certificates from Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, director of the school and president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs.

Certificates will be awarded in the office of the Republican Senate Policy Committee with Gabrielson, Senator Robert A. Taft, Congressman Joseph Martin, and other Republican congressional leaders present.

Producer's View

TV's Opening Night Three Times a Week

By Luke P. Carroll

NEW YORK (NYHT).—Producing a full-hour dramatic show for a television audience is a job unlike any other in any branch of the theater—a job that's far more interesting and much tougher than producing a Broadway show.

The authority for that statement is Worthington C. Minor, a bundle of energy who is kept busy with various television enterprises.

"For me it's opening night with all its thrills and worries, three times a week," says Minor. He is regarded as the top TV impresario of the day—with "Studio One," "The Goldbergs" and "Mr. I. Magination" to his credit—but he has an authentic theater and moving picture background.

Beginning in 1929, after an apprenticeship under Guthrie McClintic, he directed and staged more than 27 Broadway productions, including the Pulitzer prize play "Both Your Houses."

Big Differences

"There are certain fundamental differences between producing for the theater and for television," Minor said. "The big difference is that in the theater the producer is mainly a financier.

"In television on the other hand, the producer is handed a budget and told, "get a show once a week for 39 weeks. Get the talent and all the props and stay within your budget."

"And to top it off, there is no such thing as an out-of-town tryout in television. We have all of 13 days to put a show in order, then we go on the air and that's that."

Minor exaggerates a bit when he suggests that it's all done in 13 days, but the exaggeration is understandable.

The beginning of the "Studio One" dramas, for example, goes back seven or eight weeks. That's when the story idea is born—usually in Minor's very fertile head. He reads three or four books a day, examines a half-dozen story ideas submitted by the C.B.S. television department and checks the book reviews in the major newspapers. Out of this collection comes the first chirp of a script.

Farmed Out to Writer

Once it is selected and production rights cleared, the work is farmed out to a free-lance script writer who has three weeks to turn in a script that satisfies Minor's requirements for quality, time, adaptability to the limited TV operation and all the other angles peculiar to video.

After the free-lancer turns in his script to Minor—and after he is satisfied—the script is typed and distributed to a small army of technicians. This mass distribution usually comes a month before the show is scheduled.

At this point the largest problem is getting talent. There's no shortage of willing hands—the TV pay rates are just about the highest—but there is a problem of finding the right faces. Some casting is done by just knowing people and what they can do. The rest is done just as it is in the theater, with aspiring actors and actresses reading and being weeded out by Minor or his assistants.

Two weeks before the drama is scheduled, the cast goes into rehearsal. Meanwhile, of course, the technicians are completing their chores. Everybody is given one day off during this two-week period, and then on the Sunday just before the Monday show the entire cast, the technicians and Minor go at it from noon to 7 p. m. Back again on Monday at 3:30 in the afternoon, they stay there until the one-hour show is completed at 11 that night.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Is General Ike a Charm School Grad?

Republican precinct leaders are attending a "charm school" in which they hope to learn how to win friends and influence voters.

"Have a sense of humor," says one of the teachers, "and learn to smile."

Shucks, man, if Republicans had anything to smile about in the past 18 years they wouldn't be enrolling in charm schools.

Besides, I don't think there's anything wrong with those precinct workers that a winning candidate wouldn't cure.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You seem to be interested in promoting better relations between cab drivers and the public. Maybe you'd like to publish these suggestions:

1. Whenever possible, refrain from taking a cab off a hotel hack stand for a 30-cent ride. The cruising cab will be glad to have your business; the fellow on the hack stand has wasted some "waiting" time, hoping for a better-paying job.

2. Give your driver a reasonable tip, just as you'd tip a waiter, a barber or other "service" person.

3. Be a good sport about group riding. Don't drop your friend in the first zone and then ride to the end of the fourth for the flat group rate.

I know that cab drivers have their faults, too. But it might help us get along better if the public were told about some of the hacker's problems.

Harold D. Katz
1354 Queen st. ne.

Dear Harold:

I'm in wholehearted agreement with you. We can have better relations between hackers and the public only if we have better understanding of the other fellow's viewpoint.

As a rider, there are a few things I think cab drivers should try to remember.

When I hail a cab in the suburbs and ask to be taken downtown, I resent it when my driver studiously ignores other people who try to hail him—not only in the same zone, but sometimes in the same block.

Since business has slackened off, there seems to be an understanding among hackers that group riding should be effective only during the rush hours. They'll leave the second rider for the next cab in order to share the business and get a greater total revenue out of the riding public.

For example, the other day I was less than 100 yards down the street when a cab stopped to pick up a neighbor who was headed downtown.

As the hacker picked up speed he passed so close to me that he almost ran me down. Yet he wouldn't stop for my hail.

That is not my idea of improving public relations.

I think hackers must bear in mind that the taxi business is a public utility, regulated by the District in the public interest. Anybody who knowingly enters such a business must be willing to accept Government restrictions and obey the rules of the game.

Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

Carmela Hibben, 1000 Wakefield dr., Alexandria, Va.: Thanks for setting me straight on Housman's "Shropshire Lad" poems. Never again will I take an assistant city editor's word on matters poetic. Apparently desk men aren't as good at remembering poetry as they are such obscure things as the middle initial of the cop who nabbed a spectacular burglar 12 years ago.

THERE'S WORK FOR ALL

In a recent Miscellany item I mentioned that I knew a young couple who are looking for some way to lend a helping hand in their leisure time; their question was: Where can we do the most good?

Marjorie Collins of the United Community Services (Red Feather) supplies a prompt answer:

"The Volunteer Services of our organization has need of folks who want to do constructive, helpful work," she says.

"We'd like a chance to tell this young married couple, other couples, single men and women, students, housewives, businessmen, Government girls and everybody else about the really useful and fascinating things that need doing.

"If you can teach anything from piano to shorthand; if you have a way with children; if you like hospital work; if you can file, type, keep clinical records, wrestle with statistics or serve as receptionist—we need you.

"And we'll be glad to tell you all about our Volunteer Services if you'll call Decatur 7330 and arrange an appointment, or visit us at 1101 M st. nw. Our hours are from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., but we arrange evening appointments for working people on request."

STATE OF COMMA

Joseph H. Soifer of 4036 Georgia ave. nw. forwards a clipping of an ad from a journal which apparently is short of commas. The ad reads:

"Nicely furnished private bath, $40 per month; nicely furnished semi-private bath, $25 per month."

KID STUFF

Mrs. Francis S. Robinson of 10421 Grandin rd., Silver Spring, passes along a story about her daughter Marcia Joan, who is 2½ going on 3.

The little girl was amusing herself with some thumb tacks the other day, and when she began to scatter them a bit, Mrs. Robinson handed her a box and said: "Put them in here, dear."

Marcia Joan dutifully put the tacks in the box, then handed it over with the announcement: "Here are all my income tacks, Mommie."

Lobbies Active in Alaska Issue

By Drew Pearson

A rough-and-tumble fight between the Alaskan fishing and steamship lobbies and the Alaskan people is raging in the Senate. Also mixed up in the statehood row is a pal of the President's, two labor leaders and American defenses against Russia.

Pearson

The first skirmish was a private luncheon in the Vandenberg Room of the Capitol. Host was genial, white-haired Senator Hugh Butler of Nebraska, archopponent of Alaskan and Hawaiian statehood.

In his deep, baying voice, Butler introduced to fellow committee members, "my friend, Judge Arnold, who knows much about Alaska and can give us facts concerning statehood."

What Senator Butler neglected to tell his colleagues was that Bill Arnold is also the chief lobbyist for the Alaskan fish-canning industry, fighting statehood with every trick in the book. Nor did Senator Buter say who was picking up the check for the luncheon. Arnold, a tall, aggressive personality, had almost legendary power over the Alaskan Legislature—until the last election. Then most of his henchmen were defeated and the new Legislature abolished the fish traps used by the big commercial companies.

Arnold blandly lectured the Senators off the record, "Alaska is not ready for statehood," gave each of them a natty, leather-bound book of charts. He did not, however, give the real reason why his lobby is fighting statehood—the fear that Alaskan independence will bring higher taxes to the absentee fish-company owners.

Alaskan Free Rides

Later, as the Senate Interior Committee opened its hearings on Alaskan statehood, Butler looked over the crowd of Alaskans and asked: "How many came down on the free ride?"

"These people all paid their own way," flashed back Secretary of Interior Oscar Chapman. "But I don't know," he added, "how many Mr. Arnold brought down on a free ride."

Back stage, Nick Bez, a pal of President Truman, is keeping a close watch on the fight. Bez, a big, lumbering, likable Yugoslav, and the financial backer of former Gov. Mon Wallgren of Washington, is buying the P. E. Harris fishing outfit in the Bering Sea. A contest for control of Alaskan labor is also involved. Dave Beck, the West Coast teamsters' boss, is trying to organize the cannery workers and shove out Communist Harry Brdiges, who has had a whip hand through his longshoremen. Beck is vigorously for Alaskan statehood.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are also plugging quietly for statehood. They figure this vast and strategic area will be strengthened internally if its people have self-government. If Congress turns down Alaska again, the Communists can have a propaganda field day.

Note—After Secretary Chapman publicly named Lobbyist Bill Arnold, the latter received frantic phone calls from fishing companies in Seattle asking whether he should not fade out of the picture until the heat is off. Bluff and belligerent, Arnold argued he should go through with his testimony.

Is Graham Too Honest?

The political sages are saying Senator Frank Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina, is too honest to be elected, because he won't compromise on principles for the sake of politics.

It takes horse-trading to survive in the cutthroat game of politics, they add.

This may be true, but North Carolina voters will have to take Senator Graham as he is. He will follow his conscience and stay true to his ideals no matter how many votes it may cost. This is something Graham's colleagues have learned about him.

There is no question that the little, lovable Senator from North Carolina is a Fair Dealer. His heart is as big as his size is small, and his votes are always on the side of the common people. No political temptation could change that outlook on life.

This column has talked to Senators of all political complexions about Graham. Even the most rabid Republicans agree he is probably too honest for his own good. One who opposed Graham's seating now admits he is "the most Christian gentleman" in the Senate.

Incidents from Graham's past are also catching up with him to show his true character. There was the time in 1910 when he was coaching the Raleigh High School baseball team. Raleigh was playing Wilson for the State championship. Wilson had the best pitcher, but his right foot was lame. Thus, when the score was tied 2-2 in the fifth inning, the Raleigh batters began bunting and taking advantage of the pitcher's injured foot.

After the inning, however, Coach Graham called his team around him and said simply: "Boys, if we have to bunt to a crippled pitcher in order to win the championship, I don't want to win it."

Confederate Background

Graham's political enemies are trying to smear him with the Red brush because of his liberal philosophy. But the truth is Graham is too deep rooted in North Carolina tradition—his father was a captain in the Confederate army—to be succesfully smeared.

This came up during the last war when Graham, as a member of the Labor Mediation Board, was trying to break a deadlock between the Bendix Aviation Corp. and labor. With vital production at a standstill, Graham kept the corporation lawyers and the union representatives in almost continuous session for four days and nights.

As tempers became short, a corporation lawyer snorted that he was "never saw a union you couldn't get out of."

"You should have talked to my father," grinned Graham. "He tried for four years to get out of a union and couldn't."

The ensuing laughter broke the tension and led to an early settlement.
